Sweetheart sketch

A sketch of the 39 acres of land, proposed for rezoning and sale to Sweetheart Plastics. The proposed warehouse would be almost directly across the railroad tracks from the Sweezy True Value building on Main Street. (Approximate scale: 1 inch equals 400 feet.)

Fincom hearing tonight on special town meeting articles

The Wilmington Finance Committee will hold a public hearing Wednesday night in the public library, to consider the proposal of Sweetheart Plastics to rezone land near the Boston Maine Railroad, and between Burlington Avenue and Butters Row. The hearing is scheduled to begin at 7:30.

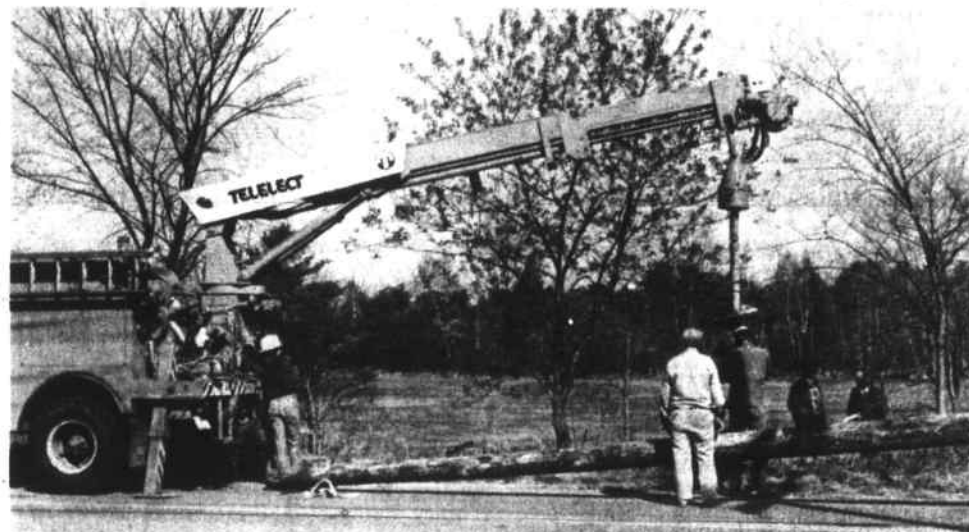

Sweetheart seeks to purchase 39 acres of the land owned by the Bedell family, and rezone that land to industrial. The Bedell family owns 76.6 acres, westerly of the railroad and easterly of the old Middlesex Canal. This includes Will Taylor's Pond, which was constructed as a cattle pond about a century ago, and is the distinctive landmark of the area. Will Taylor's Pond was not a part of the old canal turnout, which was a little to the south.

If the fincom, planning board and town meeting approve, Sweetheart will buy the 39 acres when it is rezoned, and construct a 360,000 square foot warehouse, for the purpose of storing their manufactured products. The products would be moved from the Sweetheart plant by railroad car, and a special railroad siding would be constructed into the warehouse for this purpose.

The only truck and car access would be through a right-of-way to be constructed through land zoned for business, from Main Street. A fence would be constructed across the Butters Row boundary line, with an emergency gate for police and fire vehicles only.

Pole installed

A crew from Reading Municipal Light Department installed two poles on Woburn Street last Thursday morning, adjacent to a field owned by Mr. and Mrs. Leo Markey. The Markeys had long contested the relocation of the poles to their side of the street, claiming an incorrect property line. The selectmen voted last week to allow the light department to install the poles. The new poles will correct a situation in which an old pole was leaning into the property of people opposite Markey's field.

Students complete testing on basic skills

Students in grades 3, 6 and 8 in the Wilmington public schools have completed basic skills exams reading, writing and mathematics, according to Dr. Carol Sager, assistant superintendent of schools for curriculum and instruction. Tests are now being scored and results will be shared with school personnel and parents before the end of the school year.

Under Dr. Sager's direction, standards and procedures used to determine minimum competencies were developed along with plans for providing needed assistance to students who have not yet achieved mastery in basic skills of reading, writing and mathematics at the appropriate grade levels for which they were tested.

As mandated by the state, all communities have implemented Basic Skills Improvement Programs during the 1980-81 school year. The purpose of this legislation is to help students gain competence in basic skills prior to high school graduation, through the provision of appropriate curriculum, instruction and evaluation.

Dr. Sager has been working with a committee to plan a "basic skills awareness day" to underscore the link between basic skills taught in the school and competency in any and all fields of endeavor. The committee includes teachers, administrators, parents, students, town officials, and employers.

More information on basic skills and the awareness day are available from Dr. Sager.

Card of Thanks

The family of the late Harold N. CARD OF THANKS

I would like to express my heartfelt thanks to all those who supported my candidacy for the Board of Selectmen in the recent election.

Sincerely,
Barbara Sullivan

At the conclusion of an election, it is both fitting and proper to thank the voters and campaign workers for their support. To that end, I wish to thank the voters of Wilmington for their strong vote of confidence in my initial bid for the Wilmington Redevelopment Authority.

I also wish to thank my small, but able campaign staff, consisting principally of Jim and Suzi Cushing, Pat Robarge, Pudge Cushing and Lillian McQueeney. Without their enthusiastic assistance and the active support those who signed my nomination papers and advertisements, my campaign would not have been successful. Finally, I wish to commend my opponent, Kenneth Flewelling, for his professional attitude throughout the campaign and to urge his continued assistance in resolving the issues facing the Redevelopment Authority.

To the Residents of Tewksbury

Due to technical problems with 54 channel equipment, the delivery schedule has been pushed back six months by the manufacturer.

This situation has forced Lowell Cable to adjust its construction schedule by the same period.

Although this alters our original construction schedule, we feel it is in the best interest of the town to await these improvements.

Over the next 60 days, we expect to energize these areas already cabled.

Residents will be notified as each individual section is activated.

Wilmington crime watch

by Officer William Gable

Do you want to keep your car? Because Massachusetts has the highest motor vehicle theft rate in the nation, you should take all precautions to protect a most valuable possession.

Here are a few facts for your consideration. The average value of a stolen car is $2400.00. The average value of theft of vehicle contents is $254.00. The average value of accessory items from an automobile is $139.00. Statewide annual losses of vehicles, accessories and contents approach the $100 million figure. What is the value of losses recovered? About one half the amount taken, nearly $50 million dollars.

Here are some tips to help you keep your car:

—Take time to record your vehicle identification number and your registration number on a piece of paper and keep it in your possession.

—Install some kind of anti-theft device such as an ignition kill system. Engrave the car's serial number on parts of the car that can be removed.

—Take the standard door locks off the car and install tapered buttons.

—When you park your car on the street or in a lot, turn the wheels in or out and remove the key from the ignition in order to lock the wheels. (This makes it tough to tow or move a car.)

—Never tell a parking lot attendant how long you will be gone. Never leave your house or trunk key with the ignition key. Remove all valuables from inside the car.

—Park your car in well lighted areas. Jot down your mileage when you park.

—Remember!! Lock your car and pocket the keys!!

—Don't be a statistic!!!

Frank Walters in the news

Last weekend Governor King suspended without pay Barry Locke, chairman of the Massachusetts Transportation Authority and state transportation secretary. Locke is on a leave status pending the investigation of MBTA contracts.

Attorney General Francis Bellotti has said his office is investigating possible payoffs, and was reported to be considering going to the Suffolk County Superior Court grand jury. The investigation concerns possible payoffs in connection with MBTA leases at South Station in Boston. The authority owns the station, and there is said to be a $1 million contract between the MBTA and a New York advertising firm, which acts as a broker in selling advertising, and advertising space.

Last Friday Frank Walters of Newton, assistant director of the MBTA Real Estate Department, was questioned by the attorney general's office, according to the report. Early stories said that it was Mr. Walters who had pointed to possible discrepancies, which action started the investigation. Comments by Walters have not appeared, in so far as is known, in any Boston newspaper.

Frank Walters was appointed principal assessor of Wilmington in 1951 by the then town manager, Dean Cushing. He served three years in this post.

In Wilmington he enjoyed a reputation of being a straight-forward and efficient assessor.

letters to the editor

Dear Larz:

There is something happening down in our corner of the world that I can't seem to find a remedy for. Probably the three families on Floradale could initiate a lawsuit with the Town, but we don't want to do that. The results would only be monetary and we would rather have something done about it.

First, some 10 years ago, came a parking lot. (We lost trees.) Then a warehouse for Diamond Crystal. (Lost more trees.) Then, because of this, Floradale became impassable with mud up to the tops of the wheels on a car, from water running down the street. Because we couldn't navigate, we decided we would have to have betterments. The Jackson Brothers made a beautiful street and sidewalks for us. (I pay $3000 for this. We lost more trees.)

Then came the sewer, the exchange, no less. The street was excavated twice, and not even paths to our houses were left, let alone bring a car down, so that everything had to be lugged from the Diamond Crystal parking lot. One night when I came home from work, the construction contractors had dug to "China" right up to my front steps, without permission, and inserted an iron box. This open pit was there for a week or more, and I couldn't even get a fence to protect the 85 ft depth. (Lost more trees.) When they filled it in, they used scrapings from some other street, with gravel and hot top in it. The sidewalk was patched with concrete, and the rhododendron bushes - 50 years old are gone, with all the rich loam in the yard.

Then came a long swathe to Butters Row, around 75 feet wide, from the end of Floradale through. (Thousands of trees were lost this time.) Water now sits in ponds deep enough for ducks to swim around the trees in the woods for a distance of 100 feet or more. To be truthful, the territory which was lovely, virgin land with trees and animals, now looks like the Planet of the Apes. People come roaring down the street skidding to stop on the dead end because they think it goes through by-passing the square. They then have to turn around in our driveways. Motor bikes tear up and down the swathe on the hard sand. Now, the Town Manager tells us they will have to dig up the street again next week, to remedy the errors in the sewer. And...

I picked up your paper this week to see that we are now to get Sweetheart's warehouse. I have no objection per se, for Sweetheart has been beneficial to Wilmington.

How many people have taken a stroll around the back of their other warehouse, entering from Cedar Street. There is a stagnant pond, a chain-link fence, and bare ground (Trees were lost over there.) It puts you in mind of a penitentiary court yard.

I understand that the new warehouse will be back to us - "Floradale will still be dead end. Access will be only from Main Street across the B... M Tracks."

When and where to the Committees of Conservation and-or Beautification operate. Is there some way that these construction projects can be "beautified." When are the trees going to be put back. We can be already losing so many because of "progress," that it would seem logical that the trees be planted to preserve air, land, and water for our kids and grandkids. All the schools in the world or playgrounds or reading programs or Cub Scout troops won't help them, if they can't breathe.

Thanks for your time,
Nancy H. Clark

Sincerely,
Mrs. Ann G. Walsh

Dear Larz:

As the June town meeting approaches, I read about possible further decreases in the Recreation Dept. and School Dept. budgets. There appears to be no news on cutting garbage collection. Is this activity the town's "sacred cow." It appears to me that the youth of the town is being sacrificed for garbage!

In other towns, the town dump has reverted to the use of large dumpsters. When full, these dumpsters are carted away. In Wilmington's case this can be to the proposed new facility in No. Andover. For those people not desiring to go to the town dump, independent contractors, as in the past, should be allowed with stipulations that all of the trash be deposited at the new facility.

The youth of town should not be left out as 2½ cuts are made. It is planned recreation and school athletics which foster a good atmosphere.

Yours truly,
Joseph G. Zukas

EDITORIAL - SWEETHEART
D14

Sweetheart Plastics proposes to construct a 360,000 square foot warehouse in Wilmington. What will that do to the tax rate, in these days of 2½...

Proposition 2½ is the commonly accepted term for the new law, now going into effect. Cities and towns in Massachusetts may not tax over 2½ percent of fair cash value, nor may they increase appropriations in any year by more than 2½ percent.

First those communities must standardize their assessment practices. Assessments are to be on a full fair cash value, on a certain date. In Wilmington that date is January 1, 1983.

For Fiscal Year (FY) 1984, for which the 1983 Town Meeting will appropriate, the total appropriation cannot exceed 2½ percent of the town's valuation. Guess that the valuation will be $500 million. The town will be able to appropriate $12.5 million, for FY 1984.

As a comparison, for FY 1981, the town meeting appropriated $15,653,972. The figure is quite a cut, in expenses to the taxpayer, it will be noted.

For FY 1985, the law allows the town to increase its appropriation 2½ percent, providing that there has been a 2½ percent increase in value. If there has been a greater increase, there can still be only a 2½ percent increase in appropriations.

This, like some other factors in the law, seems to be unfair. Suppose that Wilmington increased 10 percent in value in one year, and could only increase its budget 2½ percent. The police, to name one agency, would have more property to protect, with only a slight increase in available funds.

The 2½ percent "growth factor" is manifestly off base, for expanding communities. It could happen in Wilmington. It could happen in other towns, too. There are state legislators who are trying to introduce some correcting phraseology.

What about the new warehouse... Where does it fit in...

Because it will be substantially complete by next January 1, it will be a part of the $500 million valuation already guessed upon. In that sense it will be a small but appreciable factor in the payroll budgets to be voted for FY 1984, and subsequent budgets as well.

If the new warehouse is not complete on January 1, it will not be completely included in valuations.

Tewksbury frosh start fast

Tewksbury freshmen softball has gotten off to a good start this season by overpowering three clubs. In non-league action, the frosh defeated Bishop Fenwick, 46-6. In league play, Tewksbury played back-to-back games with Andover West gaining decisive victories, 23-6 and 26-14. Coach John Donoghue got a chance to look at all his players in both games.

Kim Daniels picked up all three wins with her best effort in the first games against Andover. Daniels gave up just four hits in that game, while walking five and striking out three. Tewksbury scored five runs in the first inning, six in the second and six in the fourth, while scattering runs in other innings.

Linda Barry (firstbase), Missi Riddle (catcher), Berna Pacini (centerfield), Laura Briggs (centerfield), Vicky Westover (third base) and Karen Hennessy (second base) all contributed hits for the freshmen.

Julie Burns (DH) walked three times and connected for a single to help the cause. Friday's action saw Tewksbury defeat Andover, 26-14.

The freshmen host a strong Methuen team Wednesday.

Wilmington JV Baseball

Wildcats split first eight games

Coach Bill Simmons' Wildcat JV baseball team has completed the first eight games of the enroute to a 4-4 record.

Chelmsford 6-Wilmington 5
The Wildcat pitching staff walked home three runs in the last inning to hand the Lions the win. Losing pitcher Bob Ducharme collected two hits for Wilmington.

Lowell 5-Wilmington 2
Stuart Besnoff was the hard luck loser in this well-played game. Ken Runge's triple was the only Wildcat hit. Jeff Lux scored Kevin Smith from third on a suicide squeeze in the third inning.

Wilmington 6-Haverhill 2
Bob Ducharme and Stu Besnoff combined on a four-hitter, as the Wildcats won their first game of the year at Haverhill. Ken Runge and Rick McQuestion each had two hits for the Wildcats.

Wilmington 7-Methuen 6
Trailing 6-1 going into the fifth inning, the Wildcats exploded for six runs in the final two frames to pull out their second win in a row. John Cushing paced the Wildcat comeback victory with three hits, as Bob Ducharme and Ed Olson added two hits apiece. Stu Besnoff (2-1) was the winning pitcher.

Wilmington 6-Dracut 4
Stu Besnoff scattered three hits and struck out nine, as the Wildcat JV's made a clean sweep of the three games played during vacation. Ed Olson, John Blaisdell, Jeff Lux and Rob O'Connell contributed key hits to the win.

Lawrence 13-Wilmington 3
Lawrence scored eight unearned runs in the fifth inning to put the game out of reach. John Cushing (HR) and Rob Irwin (run scoring single) were the only offensive performers in a poorly pitched effort.

Tewksbury 8-Wilmington 7
Despite long home runs by John Cushing and Ken Runge, the Redmen won this game in the eighth inning. Rob Irwin (two), Rick McQuestion and John Blaisdell had key hits for the Wildcats. Stu Besnoff (2-2) took the loss.

Wilmington 8-Austin Prep 7
The Wildcats went to "Long Ball City" in a roaring comeback victory over Paul Lyman's

Cougars. Trailing 7-2 in the fifth inning, John Cushing smacked his third homerun of the year to get the rally rolling. Gerry O'Reilly ignited a sixth inning rally with a bases empty homerun over the left field fence, but the big blow of the game came off the bat of Donny Josephson, as he rocketed a long, towering home run over the left-centerfield fence to win the game for the Wildcats.

The pitching of Besnoff and fielding by Bob Irwin helped spark the victory.

McNaughton shatters records

Wilmington High School track star Mary McNaughton continues to shatter school records.

In her last three meets, Mary has set WHS records in the mile (5:21-Lawrence), two mile (12:21.3-Lawrence Classic) and the 880 run (2:29-Dracut).

Tough

Todd Tewksbury pitcher Todd DiRocco is consoled by coach John Bresnahan and catcher Steve Kelly after surrendering two first inning runs enroute to a 2-1 loss at Lowell Friday night.

Tewksbury Youth soccer

A' squad trips Chelmsford, 3-1

In a hard fought game played at Chelmsford, Tewksbury came from behind to defeat the home squad, 3-1. Goals were scored by Ricky Miles, Robbie Busch and Jeff Stone. Assisting on two of the goals was Marc Paglia, and on the third goal Brian Hanrahan. Todd Simas dominated the midfield, while Greg Van Edna played well defensively. The goaltending chores were shared by Mike Fitzpatrick and Robbie Hunt.

Tewksbury 1-Bedford 0
Saturday, the Tewksbury A's moved within one point of first place with a pulsating 1-0 win over previously undefeated Bedford. A goal by right winger Judd Smith halfway through the game held up, as Tewksbury's midfielders constantly kept the Bedford attackers bottled up. Tewksbury travels to Billerica for a 2:30 game Saturday, May 9. The bus will leave the Junior High field at 1:30.

Under 14
Tewksbury 4-Bedford 0
Scott Bolton registered his fourth straight shutout, as the under-14 boys Tewksbury Division Four team defeated Bedford, 4-0. This pushes Tewksbury to the top of the league standings with a perfect eight points. Steve Sledz continued his torrid scoring pace, netting three more goals for 12 goals in four games for an average of three goals per game.

Team play has been the key to Sledz' scores. Matt Pinto, playing an inspired game, set Steve up for one goal, while Brian Foster on a second goal kick curved the ball right into the strings for a goal of his own.

Brian Proulx was all over the field from his rover position, controlling the flow of the game, as halfbacks Lee Sutherland, Scott Sampson, Dave Conway and Paul McSweeney kept the ball in the Bedford end of the field.

Captains for this win were Pete Kushnierek, who played an outstanding fullback position and Joey Weser, who moved in and out from his inside right slot.

Todd Bonney missed his first goal, his shot sailing just wide of the net. Ken Krugh, injured in the first half, played the rightwing as though he owned it. Ron Outridge later replaced Ken and held his own. Tom Geraghty boomed one that just missed, and Dave Cleland could not reach it for a rebound shot.

Bob Brewer and Scott Fay continually came back to help out on defense. Assistant coaches Bill DeGregorio and Bill Perrin are looking for a tough match against Wilmington this week.

Tewksbury 7-Melrose 0
On a rain-soaked Melrose soccer field, the Tewksbury under-14 boys soccer team maintained its first place standing, beating Melrose 7-0. Steve Sledz scored four goals in the contest, with assists from Brian Foster and Dave Cleland. Joey Weser, with an assist from Dave Conway, dribbled through the Melrose defense and netted a pretty goal.

Weser later assisted on Brian Prowler's driving goal from left wing. Ken Krugh, assisted by the fine defense of Peter Kushnierek and Bob Brewer, went in on the tired Melrose goalie to score a seventh goal. Ron Outridge protected Scott Bolton in goal throughout the game with long kicks. Brian Foster directed his corner kicks in front of the Melrose net, giving him two assists for the game.

Scott Bolton made two outstanding saves on the Melrose striker, coming out of his net and smothering the ball. Scott Sampson, Lee Sutherland, Tom Geraghty and Paul McSweeney played with intensity at halfback, while Dave Conway just missed several opportunities. Todd Bonney and Matt Pinto both captained the team for this game.

After three games, Sledz has nine goals; Krugh two goals and one assist; Foster four assists; Bonney one assist; Pinto one goal and one assist; Weser two goals and two assists; Proulx two goals; Conway two assists; and Cleland one assist.

Bedford comes to Tewksbury Saturday at 4 p.m.

Tewksbury Freshmen Baseball

Redmen can't capitalize

Tewksbury's freshman baseball team received excellent pitching performances, but couldn't capitalize, dropping two out of three games this past week. The team came away with an 8-5 win over Shawsheen Tech on Monday, but lost successive games to Andover West and Lawrence Central, 2-1 and 3-0.

Keith Ferullo scattered four hits, while walking five and striking out eight in Tewksbury's only victory of the week against Shawsheen Tech. Buddy Farley had two hits, while Dave Sullivan, Brian Hayward, and Bob Budryk provided Tewksbury with enough offensive punch to pull out the win.

Wednesday, the Redmen got great pitching from Tom Dunn and Rich Morneweck, but couldn't push enough runs across, losing 2-1 to Andover West. The two ninth graders allowed just two hits, but Farley's two hits were all that Tewksbury could answer with in the loss. Dunn and Gary Mackay turned in excellent defensive plays.

The first 16 Lawrence batters were easily retired by Tewksbury's Paul Laurin Friday afternoon, but the 17th batter hit a long homerun to enable Central's Tony Lumia to beat Tewksbury, as he scattered six hits. Scott Nelson had two hits for Tewksbury, while Bill Saunders and Marc Creamer made superb defensive plays in the outfield, as Central came away with the 3-1 victory.

Tewksbury hosts Greater Lowell, Greater Lawrence and Dracut in games this week at the Antonelli Field.

Wilmington JV Softball

Wildcats bop Andover, 9-4

Wilmington 9-Andover 4

The starting lineup for Wilmington got off to a good start, scoring two runs in the first inning. Cheryl Richter led off with a single, then was called out for leaving the base too early on a steal. Next, Cheryl Evans and Maureen Roche reached base via errors before Mary Ann Parks belted a double, scoring the two runs.

Wilmington 15-Billerica 11

Kathy Flynn's girls were up for this game. In the top of the first inning, Billerica came up with four runs, but this didn't bother the girls from Wilmington. They started out slowly with two runs in the first, but Cheryl Richter was the keyplayer, going three for four with a homerun.

The bottom of the seventh turned the game around for the Wildcats. Cindy Cornish reached first on an error then Pam MacKinnon rapped a single, and the next four batters each got singles giving the Wildcats the win.

Wilmington 9-Chelmsford 16

This year the JV girls were hoping to beat Chelmsford, but it didn't turn out that way. Everything was fine through the first and second innings, with the Wildcats leading, 5-1. From that point on it was Chelmsford's game.

Wilmington 20-Greater Lowell 5

Greater Lowell is a newcomer to the MVC this year, and the Wildcat girls showed them some power by scoring 10 runs in the first inning. The leading hitters for Wilmington were Sandy Craig, Maureen Roche, Jeannette Reid, Pam MacKinnon, Cindy Cornish, Chris McMenimen and Nancy Woods.

Wilmington 10-Methuen 11

Another team that the Wildcats have trouble dealing with is Methuen. Outstanding behind the plate was Marilyn Mills, who also went two for three.

Wilmington 9-Dracut 5

Last Friday, the Cats traveled to Dracut and back-to-back singles by Margie Campbell, Cornish and MacKinnon plated three runs. Parks hit a home run in the third to make the score 5-0.

Cornish pitched a superb game, throwing just 68 pitches. She also went three for four at the plate.

In the seventh inning Dracut came back with five runs, but the JV girls held on for the win.

Marilyn Mills leads the club with an average of .476, but close behind are Cheryl Richter and Pam MacKinnon with .435 and .438 averages respectively.

MVC Boys Tennis

Wildcats rip Haverhill, 5-0

Wilmington High School's boys' tennis team raised their MVC record to 3-5 last week with an impressive 5-0 blanking of Haverhill.

Leading the way for the Wildcats was the singles play of Bob Williams, who posted a 6-0, 6-2 straight sets victory.

Bob Magliozzi also won his match, 6-2, 6-0, and Scott MacDonald rounded out the super singles play with his easy 6-1, 6-2 victory.

The first doubles match provided the Wildcats with their fourth win, as the team of Sean O'Beirne and Larry Merry took a tough 3-6, 6-3, 6-1 decision over their Haverhill counterparts. Mike Medeiros and Greg MacDonald rounded out the rout with their 6-1, 6-1 victory.

In other Wilmington boys' tennis action last week, the Wildcats edged Lawrence Central, 3-2 and dropped a 4-1 match to an excellent Lowell High squad. Williams continued to play excellent tennis with solid victories in both matches.

Champs strut their stuff

Tewksbury's Youth Baseball champs kicked off the 1981 season with a parade Sunday. League results can be called into the Town Crier on Monday before 6 p.m. Scoresheets are also available at the Town Crier office.

Well done, Shriners!!
Anyone between the age of three months and 110 years who missed last week's Shrine Circus - shouldn't have. The show itself was fabulous and the Shriners themselves left nothing to be desired.

Their supervision kept traffic moving and completely under control; the courteous attention of ushers prevented any frustrations in seating; even the people manning the concession stands treated the audience as old friends. The entire event was well planned and perfectly executed.

Well done, Shriners - very well done indeed!!

Bob Kerber a different detective

Bob Kerber is a different kind of private detective. A Tewksbury resident for six years, he is, among other things, the Chairman of the Board of Trustees for the Patten Public Library.

Bob Kerber is not interested in doing work for the local police departments. His firm does not participate in investigations involving domestic matters. It will not become involved in security cases, nor guard service. Nor will it become involved in a management-labor dispute.

Bob Kerber's firm becomes involved in the cases that baffle the ordinary investigative agency.

Kerber spoke recently at the Tewksbury Rotary Club. He said, incidentally, that he has never met Paul Johnson, of the Tewksbury police, but he hired Johnson once for a special job. Johnson, Kerber declares, is "one of the finest in the business."

His firm provides evidence in criminal investigation cases for both the defense and the prosecution. They are available for liability law suits. They are deeply involved in private and professional micro-analytical cases and laboratory analysis of evidence.

The clients of his firm can have services which were not available only a few years ago. Such services involve microscopy up to 100,000 diameters, identification of all elements and isotopes, spectroscopy of metals, and other determinations that can be made only in the modern laboratories.

Laboratory analysis, Kerber says, is an essential today. His agency insists on observing the collection of material, in its pre-investigation roles. He, for instance, will never investigate an arson case without a state investigator also being present.

One of the famous cases on which his firm worked, and about which he told the Rotary Club, was that of a suicide, which was discovered on a beach at Martha's Vineyard only a few years ago.

A man's clothing was found on the beach. There were no socks, but there was a pair of glasses. He was declared a suicide.

There were 17 insurance policies. Sixteen of the companies paid off. The 17th company hired Kerber and his associates.

It took them five years. He told of how they had to trace the man who had made the glasses, a man who was not the optometrist who had made the glasses used by the man who disappeared.

The man who had committed suicide was finally found. He was living in Nevada at the time. The 17th insurance company never did pay off.

There were other stories, too, for the Rotary Club. One related to a very involved arson case.

Kerber is a partner in the firm. He spent 23 years overseas in the US Army, as an investigator in an intelligence capacity. He has now been in private business for six years and he calls himself a "senior investigator."

Armando DeCarolis, Tewksbury builder, has completed a series of meetings with town boards relative to the construction of some multi-family dwellings (MFDs) in a subdivision to be constructed between John's Fruit Stand on Main Street in South Tewksbury and Tenth Street off McLaren Road. The last discussion, a public hearing, was held Monday night in the planning board office.

Two more questions were raised Monday night in addition to one which has been hanging for a month or so with the DPW commissioners.

The most important, perhaps, is what is the meaning of "special permit" as it is spelled out in the zoning bylaw? Who enforces a "special permit"? Who grants it?

Engineer Joe Cushing, consultant to the planning board, was the man who raised the question. Joe Doherty, planning board member, thinks the Building Commissioner (William Granfield) is the responsible person. George Donovan, another planning board member, thinks the words were put into the law to give the planning board another lever in their discussions with developers.

Town Counsel Charles Zaroulis will undoubtedly be asked some questions on this matter.

There were more than half a dozen engineers present to represent the proponent and the planning board. There were also more than half a dozen residents from the Tenth Street-McLaren Road area. One of the more outspoken residents was James Evans of Tenth street. He wanted to be certain he understood what was happening.

Evans seems to have understood, from the town meeting last year, that Armando DeCarolis was to build two single family homes at the end of Tenth Street. DeCarolis declared that was not so. It was his intention, he said, to construct 36 multi-family condominiums in four buildings.

He affirmed that he will build a chain-link fence across Tenth Street to prevent that street from being used as an exit. There will be at least a 50 foot buffer zone and in some places 65 feet.

Mr. Evans declared a map which showed his boundary was in error. There will be a check-up he was promised.

DeCarolis told the audience that he plans to put in the nicest homes. When he is finished he hopes to hear someone say "well done."

He was asked if he would maintain the chain link fences after they were constructed. That, said DeCarolis, he would not do.

Only recently, he said, he had dug a ditch in the area. Before he could use that ditch it had been filled in.

The end of McLaren Road, DeCarolis declared, is a place where people park and sleep all night and where things get destroyed. He would not be responsible for anything like a fence.

"I go to work at seven in the morning, and there are people down there, sleeping in cars!"

Not discussed with the planning board at Monday's meeting was a question of size of water main which has not yet been fully settled.

An eight inch water main from Main Street to Tenth Avenue has been approved, at least in part, by the fire chief and the planning board, and the DPW.

DeCarolis has proposed to put in a 12 inch water main, of polyvinylchloride (PVC). He will, of course, pay for the work. The proposal has met the approval of the DPW Superintendent Phil Pattison. Pattison says there will be an improvement in water circulation amounting to 44 percent.

Main Street has an eight inch water main. Tenth Street has a six inch water main.

PVC has been used in Westford and Andover. DeCarolis has used it in New Hampshire projects. It is about one quarter of the weight of steel and the selectmen have been told it can be laid and repaired easily.

PVC is a substance which should not be confused with vinyl chloride, of which there have been some poor reports, according to the engineers who were present that night in the selectmen's meeting.

DeCarolis is still waiting to use PVC. He expects to get permission. It will be a first for Tewksbury.

VW engine shop approved

The Tewksbury Board of Appeals on May 4 approved a proposal to convert a part of the old slaughter house, off Trull Road, into a shop for the rebuilding of VW engines. There had been heavy opposition from neighbors at the April 27 hearing.

The area is zoned for heavy industry. Dennis Martino of Littleton was told he will be allowed to use about an acre of the land plus the back of the building for the operation.

The appeal board turned down a request of Edward Sullivan, heard about eight weeks ago, for an access into an industrial area northerly of East Street and easterly of Karen Lee Lane.

There had been heavy opposition from the neighbors at that hearing.

The appeal board stipulated that they did not have sufficient information as to what was proposed for the industrial area, and that the proponent may, on due notice, reopen the appeal.

Also turned down was an appeal by Fred Baldwin Jr., for building permits on industrial land, off Livingston Street. The hearing was held on January 26.

The appeal board said the appeal was turned down for a lack of information. If something is presented that the board feels is not detrimental, it may reconsider the case.

He won 100,000 clams

Richard Gifford, custodian of the Shawsheen School in Wilmington was a $100,000 winner in the Massachusetts Lottery on April 12. He went to a Boston TV station last week to collect the first $10,000 installment. Ric hard will collect $10,000 a year, for the next 10 years. The US Government, however, takes off the first $2,000 in each payment for repayment of income taxes. Richard had with him his brother Lyle Gifford, from Atlanta Georgia and the two men invested the money promptly. There will be nothing in the home to attract unwanted people, nor is Richard interested in any new proposal in how he should invest his sudden fortune.

Views On Dental Health

By RANDALL SMITH, D.D.S.
85 Wilmington Road,
Burlington. Phone: 272-0540.

DISLOCATION OF THE LOWER JAW

Mohammed Ali once lost a major fight when his lower jaw was dislocated by a smashing right hand punch. This can happen from a severe blow - but it can also happen in the most insidious ways. Many jaw dislocations occur after a wide yawn, or biting hard on a large piece of food. It cannot happen unless the jaws are open, except in the case of a blow to the jaw.

The lower jaw is attached to the base of the skull by two sliding-hinge joints, located in the front of each ear. When the jaw becomes dislocated, the ball slips outside the socket, and it cannot slide back again. The symptoms are simple to diagnose; the patient simply cannot close his mouth.

The important thing here is not to panic. Go directly to the dentist who may be able to replace the dislocated jaw properly in a simple office visit.

It is rare that dislocation occurs in healthy mouths. Most cases have previous joint pain or clicking sounds, a poor bite, or a combination of these symptoms. That's why it's so important to correct these dental symptoms before big problems occur.

A public service to promote better dental health.

The Senior Class of Wilmington High School

to the people of Wilmington:

BLOODMOBILE

RED CROSS BLOOD PROGRAM

The Senior Class of Wilmington High School will hold a Red Cross Blood Drive on Tuesday of next week. The idea originated a few years ago for the graduating seniors to hold a blood drive as a graduation gift to the town. Unlike a sign or a plaque at the school, the blood drive is something that has a very real meaning, especially for anyone who has ever needed blood.

The effort in the high school is certainly commendable. In addition to collecting between 100 and 150 pints of blood, the program, hopefully plants an awareness of blood needs with the graduating seniors, sort of a crowning achievement of their education career at Wilmington High School.

All healthy persons between the ages of 17 (with parental consent if under 18) and 66 are invited to give blood to help patients in this area.

Donating is safe, simple and satisfying. Your body contains about 10 or 12 pints of blood, and the blood you give is quickly replaced. You may safely donate every eight weeks.

The entire process usually takes about 30 minutes. Before you give, a careful medical history is taken. Your temperature, blood pressure, pulse and hemoglobin level will be checked. After the blood is drawn, it is typed and tested for diseases which might be transmitted to the receiving patient or patients. This mini-physical actually benefits the donor as well as the patient, because if any of the tests indicate a need for medical attention, the donor is referred to his or her personal physician.

Some units of blood are broken down into components to assure maximum utilization. This means that your blood donation may actually help several different patients. Since whole blood must be used within 21 days of donation, some of the components within a few hours, there is always a need for a constant, fresh supply of blood to be donated by volunteers in the community.

Blood is one of the doctor's most valuable tools, and many people are alive today because blood was available when they needed it.

The Red Cross doesn't need blood; people do. The Red Cross relies entirely on voluntary donors to help perpetuate a constant, sufficient blood supply, because blood comes from only one source - healthy people who are willing to give of themselves.

TOWN OF WILMINGTON

NOTICE TO WATER TAKERS REGARDING SODIUM CONTENT OF WATER

The Board of Water Commissioners has been notified by the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Quality Engineering that the Town's water supply has an average sodium content of 30 milligrams per liter, as determined by samples taken in 1980. This condition is not unique to Wilmington; all the surrounding towns have sodium levels in excess of the recommended limit of 20 mg / l.

The "Drinking Water Regulations" of Massachusetts (Section 6, Table C) require that analyses shall be repeated quarterly if the level of sodium exceeds 15 mg / l in the initial sample, and further, that consumers of the water shall be notified by the supplier if the level of sodium exceeds the Maximum Contaminant Level of 20 mg / l. This notice is submitted in conformance with the "Drinking Water Regulations of Massachusetts."

The sodium concentration present is of no consequence to the average person, since the average daily sodium intake is 3,000 / 4,000 milligrams. However, some persons suffering from cardiac and circulatory disease may be influenced by dietary sodium intake. If you are on a restrictive sodium diet, you should consult with your physician about this matter.

Sodium is a natural constituent of most ground water. It is also introduced into the water from outside sources. We feel that our problem is primarily due to road salting during the winter months, which is carried into the ground water during spring. Removal of sodium from water is expensive and inefficient. The most practical way to keep the sodium content within acceptable limits is to monitor road salting programs.

Again we emphasize that the concentration of 30 mg / l is of no concern to the average consumer.

Woburn YMCA holds 'Miles for Mankind'

by Carol Cooke

Come join the fun at the 11th Annual "Miles for Mankind" race on Sunday, May 17 at 9:30 a.m. sponsored by the North Suburban YMCA in Woburn.

The purpose of the race is to raise money for YMCA youth programs through participants' sponsors. Half of all funds raised will be used for youth programs and activities at the North Suburban YMCA. The remainder of the funds will go to YMCA youth programs in such countries as Cambodia, the Philippines, Taiwan, and Uganda.

This is the race for everyone, since you have the option of walking, running, bicycling, or roller skating in either a five mile or ten mile race. The race will cover a five mile route beginning and ending at the North Suburban YMCA on Lexington Street in Woburn. The ten mile race will cover the same route, only participants will complete two laps.

Both races will be categorized according to age and sex. Prizes will be awarded to the winner of each division. A special award will be given to the person who collects the most sponsor money.

Those interested in entering the race can pick up sponsor forms at the North Suburban YMCA. Completed sponsor forms must be returned to the Y by Saturday, May 16. Money collected from sponsors should be turned in at the main desk of the YMCA by Saturday, May 23. Sponsors can pledge any amount per mile they wish, and thereby show their support for the YMCA. All contributions are tax deductible.

T-shirts will be given to everyone who raises $15.00 in sponsor pledges.

This is one of the few races where participants can have both the satisfaction of racing for themselves, and the benefit of the YMCA. To demonstrate their appreciation to all participants, the staff at the North Suburban YMCA will hold a cook-out after the race with all-you-can-eat for $1.00 open to participants and their families. A few family swim will also be offered.

We hope to see the whole family participate in our "Miles for Mankind" race on Sunday, May 17. Anyone wishing more information may call the Y at 935-3270.

Assessing work begins Monday

The Board of Assessors in Wilmington is preparing to implement a Tax Equalization Program designed to spread the property tax burden equitably among all taxpayers. Since the last Tax Equalization Program, property values have increased significantly and at varying rates. This has caused inequities to develop in the assessed values, and thus the tax payments of property owners within the town. In addition, state regulations, based on a 1974 State Supreme Judicial Court case initiated by the Town of Sudbury, now require that all property in the Commonwealth be assessed at full and fair cash value.

The new assessed values will be reflected in the tax bills for fiscal year 1983. This program will result in a substantial increase in property values and a significant drop in the tax rate.

The Board of Assessors has contracted with the appraisal firm of McGee, McGane, Inc. of Wilmington, to assist in conducting this program. McGee McGane has assisted more than 60 communities in Massachusetts in conducting similar programs.

Preliminary work is scheduled to begin Monday, May 11, 1981, when representatives of the firm, carrying proper identification, will begin field inspections of properties having recent sales throughout the town. Therefore, no localized area can be identified. However, in the near future when field inspections of all properties begin, announcements will be publicized as to what areas and dates work will be done. The Board of Assessors asks that the residents of the community cooperate fully with its personnel so that the program can be completed as quickly, accurately, and efficiently as possible.

Wilmington senior topics

Older American Month

May has been designated by the government as Older American Month. Events all over the country will highlight the older Americans. Their talents and contributions will be demonstrated at various events. Wilmington's older citizens will be celebrating the event with a Senior Fair on the common, Saturday, May 23. Participation in this event by our seniors can be found in many ways. Some will donate their time from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the tables which will be set up on the common. Others will work diligently making articles for the tables.

At last year's Senior Fair, a luncheon table was set up. Many delicious meals were prepared, which were a tremendous success and sold out very quickly. If you could prepare food for luncheons, the seniors would appreciate a call to the Center (657-7595). Other articles which could be brought to the common the morning of May 23 are pastries, flea market articles and crafts.

Gladys Babine was honored by the Council on Aging and town and state officials at the regular monthly meeting of the Council on May 4. Gladys will be stepping down as a member of the Council on Aging Board after serving the seniors of Wilmington in this capacity for nine years. She has served diligently on the board and deserved the thanks of all the seniors.

Room available

Any senior would like a couple of private rooms and a private bath in the home of an elderly senior, please call Mrs. Cunningham at the Drop-in center for information.

Whist party May 11

In the month of May the Arts and Crafts Committee will have only one whist party due to the holiday on May 25. This party will be held Monday, May 11 starting at 1:30 p.m. in the Drop-in Center. The whist parties are excellent socials, well accepted by the seniors. New seniors who have not yet involved themselves with the community center are urged to 'check out' the whist parties, dance lessons, exercise classes and other socials that involve contact with other seniors, allowing friendly introductions and eventual close friendships.

Some seniors who signed up for the fuel assistance program and have not used up their initial allotment find out that their escrow accounts with the Community Teamwork in Lowell have terminated. They will be unable to use the money which should have been set aside for them. The only recourse is to write a letter to your representatives in Washington, Senators Kennedy, Tsongas and Rep. Shannon. They should be informed about the situation.

Hints to would-be buyers

Time to stake your being to a personal computer?

By David F. Salisbury
Staff correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

Shopping for a personal computer is not like buying a refrigerator or a new car. Small computers are a uniquely new product creating an entirely new market. As a result, the buyer must either devote considerable time to learn the special jargon of this brave new technological world or else find sales people he or she trusts.

When considering the purchase of a computer, the first step is to make a list of the things you think you need it for. A computer can speed such tasks as preparing manuscripts and reports, billing customers, setting up filing systems, aiding in the preparation of income tax forms, giving access to specialized information such as stock market quotes in a timely fashion - or even writing and typesetting this article.

If you are curious about the nuts and bolts of this new technology and feel it worth your time to learn about it, the first step is to do some background reading. A number of introductory books on microcomputers are on the market, but they tend to be oversimplified and quickly go out of date. It would be better to sample some of the plethora of computer magazines that have sprung into being. By far the most comprehensive and in-depth of these is Byte; it may, however, be a little overwhelming to the computer novice. Byte also has the most advertisements, so it aids in surveying the available wares. Other magazines such as Creative Computing, Personal Computing, On Computing, and Interface Age are more accessible but less comprehensive.

Another good source of information is the local computer club. Here you will find people with experience on the various models available. A drawback of this approach is that computer owners tend to have fairly strong biases in favor of the systems they have purchased.

The much-vaunted home computer - an inexpensive machine that will control appliances, act as the nerve center for a security system, educate and entertain the children, give access to news and other useful information, or operate a household heating system for optimum comfort and efficiency - remains a novelty. Industry observers believe that this market will not develop in a substantial way until the mid-1980s. As a result, those considering buying such a computer for home use should justify it on recreational or educational, rather than economic, grounds.

For the small-business person, however, the $2,000-to-$18,000 price tag for these computers can usually be justified. As Data General's "The Insider's Guide to Small Business Computers" points out, "In 1970, a business computer equivalent in power to today's $18,000 small business system would have cost over $100,000. Over the decade, the decline in computer prices has averaged about 16 percent per year. Over the same time, the costs of personnel required to do manually what a small business computer can do electronically have been increasing at an annual rate of 7 percent."

When buying a computer, you must be aware of the relationship between "hardware" and "software." Hardware means equipment. Software - the programs or instructions that turn the computer from useless machinery into a valuable tool - is the most important aspect of a purchase. To a large extent, software determines how well a computer will perform the tasks in which you are interested.

Because of considerable variation in ability and business acumen among software writers, purchasers cannot count on getting the performance they think they pay for. The problem is compounded by the fact that software vendors, concerned with unauthorized duplication, will not give dealers demonstration copies of their products. Thus it is difficult to be sure you are getting the best software available. This is not a trivial problem, because buying software can add up to more than a quarter of the total cost of a computer system.

When you walk into a reputable computer store with your list of tasks, however, the sales people will do their best to match these with the available software. Because the software, in general, is tailored to a specific brand of computer, it will determine which hardware you consider.

In shopping for personal computers, you should plan to visit several stores. No single shop carries all the brands you will want to consider. The TRS-80, the biggest-selling brand of personal computer, is sold only at Radio Shack stores. Other stores sell Apple, Hewlett-Packard, Vector Graphics, Cromemco, Commodore, and other varieties.

It may take you a while to find a good salesman. They are in the minority. When you test them, you find that many do not know very much about their product. And those who do may have an unfortunate tendency to be arrogant in their dealings with customers. Do not let this put you off. It is a widely recognized problem, which the computer retail industry is trying to correct.

Each computer system has its strengths and weaknesses. Apple has outstanding graphics. Radio Shack models tend to be a little bit cheaper per unit capacity. Hewlett-Packard is especially powerful for scientific and engineering computations. Vector Graphics is tailored to word processing. Cromemco is a "Cadillac" microcomputer system. Commodore is only beginning to be extensively distributed in the US at this time.

There are software distinctions as well. Apple has actively encouraged independent software writers, with the result that a great deal of high-quality software is available. Radio Shack, on the other hand, has attempted to discourage the independents. As a result, it is par-

Roving with Dan Ferullo

No good at "waiting"

Not us; a friend of ours:

I don't like going to special events. Like weddings. It's not that I dislike weddings, actually. It's that I hate getting ready to go to weddings. The reason is my wife. Don't take me the wrong way. I love my wife. She's the most wonderful wife a guy could have. Even during these times of feminine awareness, she's the epitome of what I always wanted in a wife. Except for one bad habit she has: whenever we have to go someplace special, she inadvertently works me up into such an emotional state beforehand that I hardly get to enjoy myself until the event is practically over. She does this in a manner which, I gather from my sympathetic married comrades who frequent neighborhood bars from time to time with me, is not uncommon. This is pretty much how it happens:

On the day of a wedding, say, my wife begins to put her whammy on me early in the morning, when she restlessly wanders through the house and mulls over her agenda for the day looking like a wildcat leeringly circling her prey before the kill.

I tell her, look, it's only a high school girlfriend, not Lady Diane.

But that doesn't make any difference, and like the wildcat's doomed prey, who suddenly realizes he's about to face a no-win situation, I begin to feel my first tinge of nervousness. Finally she decides the first thing on her agenda is to go to the hairdresser's. The wildcat's prey gets a reprieve. How wonderful! But I soon realize it's false security. The day grows late, and my wife's brief trip to the hairdresser's turns into an all afternoon affair. Probably clothes shopping. So I decide to do as I always do in situations like this: I get ready for the wedding first, making sure to do as my mother taught me to do and clean up the bathroom after me. By the time I finish dressing she still hasn't returned. It's O.K., though, because we'd agreed to skip the church ceremony, which is at five o'clock, and go straight to the reception, which we figured will begin around six.

But when five o'clock rolls around and she isn't home, I start to get nervous again. Why, I ask myself. It's her friend's wedding. I guess I'm just the kind of guy who, when he thinks he's not going to be someplace on time, gets jittery. Finally, she shows up. I point to the clock and ask her where she's been all afternoon.

"I went shopping," she says. What did I tell you? Before I have a chance to say another word (she knows that if she gives me the opportunity I'll let into her for always delaying our plans),

Following is the first selection by Mark Pizer a Reading businessman.

Where to?

Where to, little man, where to?
What destination do you pursue?
What's your aim, little man
And where is your target?

On your way - with neck-breaking speed - your goal to achieve.
You destroy, corrupt, desecrate and betray
The pillars of moral values, decency and fair-play.

In the name of love - hatred is your sermon.
In the name of peace - force and destruction you preach.
Instead of charity and sharing - greed is your creed.

Great is your insatiable hunger
For power and wealth
An ambition drenched in hypocrisy, lies and stealth.

When you arrive at your destination
Your goal achieved;
Your pockets bulge with silver and gold
But your soul is empty, barren and cold.

Roving with Dan

she's dashed into the bathroom and suddenly I hear the shower running. In the meantime, I go into the den and try to remain calm by fiddling with the knot in my tie between innings of the Red Sox game. Before I know it the clock reads quarter to six.

I call to my wife, "Honey, we're going to be late. You know I don't like walking into a reception when everybody is seated and eating."

"Relax," I hear her yell from the bedroom. "They'll be taking pictures first, anyway."

I go in to see what progress she's made.

This is when round two of anxiety strikes with a vengeance. I am engulfed by billows of steam floating aimlessly from the bathroom into the hall and around the corner into our bedroom. When the clouds dissipate a bit, I catch a glimpse of the mess left behind: wet towels strewn on the floor, on the toilet and on the edge of the sink; soap bar, shampoo and conditioner bottles, Trac-II razor and wash cloth set on the edge of the tub; toothbrush, toothpaste, another wash cloth, contact lenses case (opened), distilled water (for contacts, closed), hair brushes (two), comb (one), and barrettes (two) set on top of the toilet tank and on the back of the sink; and a dirty ashtray set on the window sill.

I mosey into the bedroom (following the trail of wet footprints and sprinkles of baby powder), where I discover the following: my wife, still dressed in a terry cloth robe, with her hair still wet (she has short, curly hair), is perched on the edge of the bed and carefully applying make-up in front of one of those mirrors that has a light for every phase of the day a woman passes through. I think it is switched to the night phase. The night table from which she worked and the bed are covered with a myriad of compacts, eye brushes, mascara, blush, lipsticks, nail polishes, a curling iron (warming up), and goodness knows what else. Inbetween strokes with the eyelash brush she takes a puff from a cigarette, then returns it to the indentation on the lip of the ashtray that is set next to the mirror.

I say, "This place looks like a cyclone struck it!"

"I know," she says, in a tone that suggests that I should try to understand that she's had a hectic day but things will be picked up and back to normal tomorrow.

I shake my head, surrender, and then go back to my seat in front of the tv. If I had the time, I think, I'd go to a movie until she's ready. Or go watch a softball game, as I did not long ago on a day we had to get ready for a similar special occasion. On second thought, even on that day I couldn't escape the anxiety that usually plagues me while waiting for my wife to get dressed. I went to a nearby park to watch my friends play a couple of innings of softball. Suddenly I spotted a thick cloud of black smoke rising from behind a clump of trees that obscured my house.

Oh, my God, I thought, she's left a cigarette burning and now the house is on fire!

I dashed to my car and sped toward home. As I got closer I saw what the real trouble was: a field fire was out of control behind some neighbors' houses, and firemen were arriving to put it out. I breathed a sigh of relief.

On this particular Saturday afternoon I have no time to escape to a softball game, and there is no sigh of relief at hand. I have to put up with the delay, with the mess, with the anxiety. Oh, well, I've survived every other time, I think, so why not now?

I hear my wife call out from the bedroom. "Honey, would you mind setting up the ironing board for me?" she asks, and then she says, "I've got to run an iron over my blouse. It'll take only a second, then I'll be ready to leave."

I look at my watch; the big hand is on the twelve and the little hand is on the six. I fiddle with my knot, and then I figure I better answer.

"Yes, dear," I say, then I go into the kitchen to set up the ironing board.

It is now the time of year to start the planning and preparation of your vegetable garden. Even the smallest of garden plots can produce an abundance of vegetables for fresh eating and for home preservation. Vegetable gardening can be both an enjoyable hobby and beneficial; providing fresh produce during the summer months. This accounts for the rapid rise in gardening in the past few years.

Vegetable gardening is simple. All you need to start your garden is a sunny location, well aerated, loose soil, lime, fertilizer and water. Spend time to keep a healthy garden, free from insects and diseases. There are many vegetable varieties which are insect and disease resistant. These can be obtained from most seed companies or local garden centers.

Homeowners who would like to raise their own vegetables this summer will be interested in the Home Vegetable booklet available from the Middlesex County Extension Service, 105 Everett Street, Concord, Ma. 01742. This free 25 page booklet gives details on soil preparation, how to plant, pest control, etc.

Heublein rare wines come to Boston

How does one decant a $20,000 bottle of wine? "Respectfully," says Alexander C. McNally, Director of International Wines for Heublein Inc. On Thursday, May 21, at a Preview Tasting, McNally will show exactly how it's done as he decants and serves wines that are more than a century old.

The event, which will take place at the Hyatt Regency Cambridge from 12 noon — 4 P.M., will serve as a public preview of many of the wines to be featured at the 13th annual Heublein Premiere National Auction of Rare Wines. The world's largest one-day sale of rare wines, the Auction will be held in New Orleans on Thursday, May 28, at 9:30 A.M. in the Royal Sonesta Hotel.

"The Boston Preview Tasting will offer a selection of 132 wines, a range that is unprecedented in any preview to date," says McNally. "It's natural that Heublein should distinguish the Boston area in this way. This community is known for its sophistication and knowledge of wines, particularly French imports. And this year the Auction will highlight a quartet of Burgundies produced by the House of Bouchard Pere & Fils of Beaune in the classic 1865 vintage."

The Boston area is also a cultural and communications center, easily accessible from all points along the Eastern seaboard," McNally adds. "Many wine enthusiasts from Florida, Washington, D.C. and points north have already made reservations to attend the preview in Boston."

Attendance at the tasting is not restricted to wealthy wine experts, McNally is quick to point out. "Previews attract an interesting cross section of people. Many simply find it an exhilarating experience to spend an afternoon sampling wines that cost thousands of dollars."

One wine in this category that will be previewed in Boston is the oldest dry red table wine ever offered for public sale. The vintage 1791 wine was retrieved from a wine cellar near Lyon, which was rediscovered in 1975 after more than a century. Other rare wines available for tasting include the 1865 Burgundies Beaune Premiere and Chambertin, offered in commemoration of the 250th anniversary of their producer, the House of Bouchard Pere & Fils of Beaune.

Detailed descriptions of the wines to be offered at the Preview and Auction are described fully in the 1981 Auction Catalogue, which also serves as an invitation to attend the two events. The catalogue includes a comprehensive twelve-year review of past Auction prices, maps of the world's great wine-growing regions and a feature on the House of Bouchard Pere & Fils of Beaune.

The May 21st event marks the fourth annual Heublein Preview Tasting to be held in Boston.

Computer stores popping up everywhere

By Thomas Watterson

In the midst of busy downtowns and bustling shopping centers, they are quite refuges where darkened screens and tiny flashing lights stand watch. Many of the people who come inside are afraid of what is sold here, but they spend a lot of money to buy it anyway.

These retail havens sell small computers, and as they pop up in cities and suburbs around the United States, they are changing the way these desktop electronic whiz-bangs are sold to American business.

Instead of waiting for computer salesmen to show up at their offices, businessmen are going into the stores, looking over the models from as many as half a dozen manufacturers, plunking down $3,000 to $25,000, and carrying out their new microcomputers, which usually include a TV-like display screen and keyboard, some kind of memory system (often a "floppy disk"), and a printer.

And not all the people who shop at retail computer outlets run small businesses, points out Ralph Gilman, a senior computer analyst at Dataquest, a Cupertino, Calif., high-technology market research firm. An increasing number of customers are coming from large corporations that already have powerful, centralized computer systems with dozens of terminals spread about the offices. Many of these executives, however, want their own self-contained computer that is not tied into the central, mainframe computer.

Elliot J. Hertz, store manager at a Computerland branch in downtown Boston, says that for these people the advantages of privacy, not having to worry about a main computer being "down" when they want to work, and the ability to design programs to suit their own needs outweigh the lack of connections to the main office computer. When they do want to hook up to the main computer to send or receive information, there are connections that let them do this, Mr. Hertz added.

"We're getting more and more customers like this," he observed.

Computerland, based in San Leandro, Calif., is one of several fast-growing retail computer chains. Another is the Computer Store, with headquarters in Burlington, Mass. At Computerland and the Computer Store, customers can select from such brands as Apple, Commodore, Atari, Zenith, Hewlett-Packard, and Texas Instruments.

In addition, some of the larger computer companies, including Digital Equipment, IBM, Xerox, and Data General, have been opening retail outlets to sell their own equipment. And Tandy Corporation's Radio Shack stores include a line of computers for home and office use. Small computers are also beginning to be sold in many big-city department stores and in some branches of major retail chains such as Sears, Roebuck and Montgomery Ward, says Michael Witter, managing editor of Computer Retailing, an Atlanta-based magazine.

Computerland is the largest retail computer chain, with almost 170 stores around the world and about 8 new ones opening every month. More than 80 percent of these are in the U.S. Computerland franchises all of its stores, "because we feel an owner-operator of a store is far superior to an employee of the company running a store and answering to a manager far away," Edward E. Farber, Computerland's president, says.

Depending on location and store size, it would cost a franchise holder $125,000 to $250,000 to open a Computerland store, including the computers, he said.

At the Computer Store, which has 11 company-owned stores and three franchise outlets, some $15 million worth of hardware and literature was sold last year, nearly double the company's 1979 sales of $8 million, says Richard Brown, president. Within the next year the company will add "from half a dozen to a dozen" stores, he says.

An outgrowth of the mail-order computer business, where the parts were sold to do-it-yourselfers who had to put them together (and fix them on their own if something went wrong), the computer stores today are designed to appeal to the person who knows very little about computers.

"The small-business man, whether he's doing accounting, bookkeeping, or inventory, needs a lot of support," Mr. Gilman says. Computer store operators have to spend a lot of time educating customers and answering questions as they learn more about their computers, and giving basic service.

"A lot of hand-holding is necessary," Computer Retailing's Mr. Witter says. "It's the thing that separates the computer specialty store from the direct-mail business. The buyer who gets his equipment through the mail may want it serviced, and the dealers won't do it...unless the customer agrees to buy add-on pieces in the future."

"There is resistance" on the part of many businessmen to computers, Mr. Brown says. "People tend to have an inbred fear of computers. It goes back 5 or 10 years when computers were very expensive and complicated." Today, he contends, they are neither, and "the trick to selling computers is not very complicated." If the salesman can put the customer in front of a computer terminal, he says, the businessman can quickly perform tasks similar to those his company handles.

As with many innovations, age seems to be a factor in selling the idea of a computer.

"When we go to a trade show," Mr. Brown related, "if a person is over 35, we can't get them to come into the booth. If they're under 20, we can't keep them out...When those under-20-year-olds reach the age where they become managers, this business is going to fly."

Spring driving tips

Front end alignment is usually one of the first considerations for spring car maintenance, says the ALA Auto and Travel Club. To determine if your car needs to be realigned, have the ball joints, idler arm, pitman arm, tie rod ends, and tie rod end sleeves all checked for winter wear and damage.

Worn shock absorbers can cause undependable braking, skidding, swerving, sideways, poor steering, loss of control, uneven and excessive tire wear, and an annoying, uncomfortable ride. The ALA Auto and Travel Club advises, shock absorbers which have weakened due to winter driving should be replaced in the spring.

If your owner's manual recommends a spring tuneup, this is also a good time to check the battery, fuel pump, drive belts, and engine compression, suggests the ALA Auto and Travel Club.

ticularly difficult to assess the quality of non-Radio Shack software written for TRS-80 machines.

Texas Instruments has been even more proprietary with its system, so very little software has become available. The problem became so acute that TI reversed its position recently and has begun soliciting outside software developers.

Another aspect of a computer purchase that requires major consideration is servicing. The computers, almost entirely solid-state electronics, generally fail "out of the box" or not at all. Printers and some of the other peripherals, on the other hand, may require substantial servicing. It is generally possible to get computer equipment at a considerable discount through the mail or through outlets that will not service what they sell. If the computer is to be a critical piece of equipment, the costs that can result when it fails — especially if the only way to service it is to mail it to a distant repair center — can easily outweigh the initial savings.

Once you have become conversant with the magazines and have visited the shops, it is probably time to redo your list of needs. When returning to the salesman with this final set of tasks for the computer to do, you should insist on getting a statement of how completely a given system will meet your specific needs. It is seldom, if ever, that the computer will be able to do everything the way you want in exactly the way you wish. In fact, it may prove necessary for you to change the way you do things in order to get the maximum benefit from a computer system.

Although the computer market has improved considerably in the last few years, the buyer must still be wary. Buying a computer, and getting what one bargains for, requires a major effort.

The main focus of the program will be to aid participants in translating what they learn into curriculum projects or other educational ventures. It aims to broaden student understanding about the interplay between science and social values. The program also seeks to foster students' ability to think through these issues in a clear and systematic way. It will involve specialized instruction in science, making use of the U Mass-Boston science facilities. It will include consideration of issues in methods of discovery and experiment and problems in applying scientific knowledge through contemporary technology.

For application and additional information about Critical and Creative Thinking in Science, contact Dr. Robert Swartz, project director, U Mass-Boston, Boston, Ma. 02125. Telephone (617) 287-1900, Ext. 2787.

NEW GAMES

The Medford Community Schools and the New Games Foundation are holding a New Games Festival on Sunday afternoon, May 31, from 2 to 4 P.M. at Medford High School.

At a New Games Festival you can play games you never heard of, replay some of your old favorites, or invent your own game and share it with everyone else. Join in as we play games like Earthball, DumDumDaDa, and Catch-the-Dragon's-Tail; or how about Prui, DohDohDoh, or Snake-In-The-Grass? At a New Games Festival you can play both competitive and non-competitive games, as well as variations of both.

A New Games Festival is a way for everybody in our community to have fun and get to know each other better, by playing together. You can play a game with as few as two people, or hundreds of people can join together in the Lap Game. In New Games everyone plays first string. It doesn't matter how big or how old you are, there are games for everybody from Little Leaguers to Little Old Ladies.

The Festival is part of the Community Schools' observance of its tenth anniversary, making it the oldest community school in Massachusetts. During the weekend of May 29-31 some sixty people will be participating in New Games Training; these people are recreation leaders, camp counselors, teachers, street workers, and just folks who love to play. The Festival is the finale of the Training Program, and a turn-out of some six to eight hundred people is hoped for. The festival will be held in the gymnasium if it rains, and the event is free. People wishing to register for the three-day training are urged to contact Court Booth, Community Schools Coordinator, at Medford High School.

Cancer

Screening

Kit

In the spring, many people's thoughts turn to weight-loss diets. Your American Cancer Society, however, is trying to interest men and women over fifty in a different kind of diet — one which will enable them to take a life-saving test.

On April 28, more than 110,000 American Cancer Society Crusade volunteers called upon their neighbors to request contributions and distributed coupons redeemable locally on May 13 for a free bowel cancer screening kit. The do-it-yourself, take-home test will be offered to all persons who are 50 years of age or over. The test detects hidden blood in the stool, a sign of possible cancer.

"Participants will be able to eat just about anything that they normally eat," said Dr. Malcolm Veidenheimer, Chairman of the Cancer Society's Massachusetts Division Colo-rectal (Bowel) Cancer Task Force. "The only 'don'ts' are rare meat, turnips, horseradish, aspirin, and tonic or vitamin preparations containing vitamin C in excess of 250 mg. per day."

Dr. Veidenheimer also noted that those who are taking the test should be sure to eat the following: vegetables, especially lettuce, spinach and corn; fruit, especially prunes, grapes, plums and apples; peanuts; popcorn; bran-containing cereal; and small portions of chicken or tuna fish.

The pocket-sized test — called a Hemocult or guaiac test — contains three specially-treated paper slides and three wooden applicator sticks. Each slide contains two windows. Participants will be instructed to use the wooden applicator to obtain a small stool specimen at the beginning of a bowl movement and smear it in the window marked "A". A second stool specimen must be taken at the end of the movement and smeared on the window marked "B". This procedure will be followed for a total of three consecutive bowel movements, according to Dr. Veidenheimer. Then the test should be mailed to the laboratory designated on the kit envelope. Each participant will be notified of the results.

Dr. Veidenheimer said that stool specimens should not be collected during a menstrual period or while suffering from bleeding hemorrhoids. The slides should be protected from heat, sunlight and fluorescent light.

An American Cancer Society volunteer will be available to answer questions at each pick-up site. Sites are listed on the coupons which are being distributed by Cancer Society volunteers.

For more information, call your local American Cancer Society office, or 1-800-952-7664, toll-free.

Examining animal aging

A field mouse in the wild is lucky to be a year old. Yet, its cousin, the pocket mouse may live to five years of age. Why do some animals live longer than others? And how do different animal species regard their elders?

According to International Wildlife magazine, scientists are studying senescence, or aging, in wildlife to find out the answers to these questions, and in turn, to better understand the processes involved in human aging.

The answer to the mouse mystery is simple. "Some small mammals may live longer than others of similar size because they spend part of their lives in hibernation or in dormancy, their bodies barely functioning," explains the National Wildlife Federation's bimonthly publication. Thus the pocket mouse, which spends the hot desert season in a state of torpor, will live much longer than the on-the-go field mouse.

Until recently, almost everything we knew about animals that live to be old came from zoos. Longevity records for zoo animals, says International Wildlife, include: a 77-year-old elephant; a 65-year-old vulture; a 49-year-old hippopotamus; a 38-year-old zebra. Cold-blooded animals last even longer, with tortoises reaching 150 years; sturgeon, 100; carp, 50; and toads, 36.

Unfortunately, zoo records can be misleading since animals tend to live longer in the security of a zoo than they do in the wild. However, such records do give us an appreciation for some species' potential life spans.

"Animals that are most likely to be old in the wild are those which, as adults, have no predators except man," says International Wildlife. Most of these are large — elephants, hippos, rhinos, lions, tigers and wolves. But some, such as the Galapagos tortoise, survive not only because of their large size, but also because of their isolated habitat.

Scientists have found that a wild animal's age can be estimated in many ways, such as by inspecting the lens from a rabbit's eye, the thickness of baleen plates in the mouths of whales, the annual rings in the horns of sheep and antelope, and tooth wear, or in some species, "rings" in a tooth. Teeth are, in fact, one of the most important considerations for life in the wild; research shows that most wild animals live only as long as their teeth hold out.

After spending years living among some species in the wild, animal behaviorists have observed that in the "social" species — those animals that live and travel in groups — older males and females are treated quite differently. "Males are generally of prime importance to a social group only when they are dominant," says International Wildlife. Eventually, older males are driven from a group by younger males when their strength and breeding capacity have been reduced by age.

Older females, in contrast, do not seem to suffer this loss of social status. Among most species, old females usually continue to reproduce, although they have fewer offspring than the younger females. Female elephants up to fifty years of age continue to function as "matriarchs" in their social group, and even the feeblest lionesses are allowed to share the kills of other pride members.

UMass designs shuttle telescope

A radio telescope of graphite and epoxy, with the most accurate surface of any space radio telescope yet developed, is being designed for the Space Shuttle program by a group at the University of Massachusetts-Amherst.

The graphite-epoxy disc is being designed to hold its shape under the extreme temperatures of earth orbit, where the sun may be heating one side of the disc and other parts may be in the cold shade of space. UMass has designed a surface of graphite fibers molded into epoxy that won't warp under these conditions.

UMass is developing the telescope with NASA (National Aeronautics and Space Administration) funding. The preliminary design phase was completed earlier this spring and the UMass group, headed by Dr. K. Sigfrid Yngvesson of the electrical engineering department, is waiting for a NASA go-ahead to begin the next phase.

SINTOX (Space Interstellar Telescope) is the name of the UMass project. The telescope will work in the millimeter wave band of the radio spectrum to detect and study oxygen molecules in space. Radio astronomers have discovered some 40 different molecules in the interstellar clouds but have made no direct observations of oxygen molecules because of interference from oxygen in the earth atmosphere.

The SINTOX instrument package has been designed with many technical innovations. An innovative receiver has been designed which is capable of simultaneously detecting six of the characteristic oxygen wavelengths. All units within the receiver are designed with space operation in mind; the receiver is much lighter and uses much less power than comparable radio telescopes operating from the ground.

The entire instrument is controlled by a microcomputer contained within it. Data will be transmitted to the ground and reviewed by the SINTOX team at the Johnson Space Center in Houston.

An important aim of the definition phase study of the project has been to make the design sufficiently flexible so that it will be reusable for other missions. One possibility is using the instrument to detect the water vapor which is the main constituent of the atmosphere which surrounds comets. If successful, such detection would be another first, made possible by the advanced technology of the SINTOX instrument. A particularly interesting opportunity for this would be Halley's Comet, which returns in 1985-1986.

St. Paul's readies for royal wedding

By Christopher Andreae

The announcement of the engagement and the wedding date of Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer was as much of a surprise to Commander Charles Shears as it appears to have been to the rest of the world. He was also surprised to hear where the wedding was to take place. And he was quite unprepared, he says, for the flood of questions he has received, not only from the press and television, but also in the form of letters from ordinary people.

Commander Shears is registrar of St. Paul's Cathedral, the great building designed by Sir Christopher Wren in the 17th century, where the royal couple is to be married on July 29. He is in charge of the administrative side of the cathedral, a position he has held for three years.

His first experience with a large royal occasion in the cathedral was last year, when a thanksgiving service was held to celebrate the Queen Mother's birthday. He is glad now for that experience. "I know more about dealing with all the different people involved - the BBC, the palace, the police," he says.

Does the cathedral arrange everything? Not at all. Organization is a matter of amicable agreement and cooperation between the church and the lord chamberlain's office. At the time of a recent interview he was still waiting to hear from the Archbishop of Canterbury, and of course from Prince Charles and Lady Diana themselves.

"After all, it is a wedding," he emphasizes, giving the feeling that St. Paul's would behave like any small parish church would when asked by a couple if they could be married in it. The difference in scale is quite striking, of course. St. Paul's has been called "the parish church of the British Empire," and the wedding will certainly bring an international flavor back again.

The cathedral's sheer size will contribute to the magnificence of the occasion - 515 feet long, 248 feet wide, and, to the top of the cross on the dome, 365 feet. It is this superb dome, which so famously dominates the London skyline, that everyone thinks of first and foremost. It is dramatic inside as well as out. Nikolaus Pevsner has written: "The first impression one receives on entering the church is one of a short nave with aisles leading towards a dome of unaccountable width." The interior spaces and vistas of the building are continuous, without Gothic screens to break them up. The scene on July 29 should be one of some splendor in this great classical masterpiece of Sir Christopher Wren, built between 1675 and 1710.

In choosing St. Paul's for his wedding, Prince Charles has made a great break with tradition. The last royal wedding to take place here (and that was in the medieval cathedral destroyed in the great fire of 1666) was Henry VIII's elder brother in about 1500. Westminster Abbey was expected to be Charles's choice. In fact, St. Paul's is not really a wedding church. Very few weddings ever take place here, and those that do are confined to the "OBE Chapel" and are usually for people with the Order of the British Empire.

The choice of St. Paul's for royal events seems to be on the increase. Apart from the Queen Mother's birthday service in 1980, the Queen's silver jubilee service was held here in 1977.

"We are delighted that the wedding is to be here," Commander Shears admits. The "virgins" (there is a tradition of old-fashioned spelling at St. Paul's) and the work staff are already busy planning and making special efforts to see that the cathedral will be as clean and tidy and beautiful as it can possibly be.

Although details of the service are still incomplete, there seems little doubt that there will be a magnificent procession through the great west door, and that the prince himself will want the wedding to be brilliant, colorful, and spectacular. The British are specialists in this kind of total theater.

Who will arrange the flowers? St. Paul's has a team of volunteer flower arrangers - among them women from the Worshipful Company of Gardeners - who immediately expressed their willingness. "But we simply don't know," he stresses. "We are still waiting to hear what the palace wants. A professional firm might be called in. Or Windsor Gardens."

One probable reason St. Paul's has been chosen is that it can hold so many people. "We have 2,000 chairs out all the time, and, with reserves, if we fill up the chancel and so on, we can bring it up to 3,000. And that's not including ushers and technicians," Commander Shears says.

He was amazed last year to see how unobtrusive the television people and equipment were. "The TV stands seem to melt into the pillars, somehow. The lighting is at triforium level, and you don't really notice it once it's on. The commentators are housed behind glass just above the great west entrance. We put up a battery of hutches for them there." Pause. "Though perhaps that's not the best phrase to describe them."

Who in fact pays the cathedral's expenses for the wedding?

"Ah, well, we hope that the expenses will be covered by the palace. The cathedral, you know, is having to look very seriously for big economies."

Tapping the Maple trees

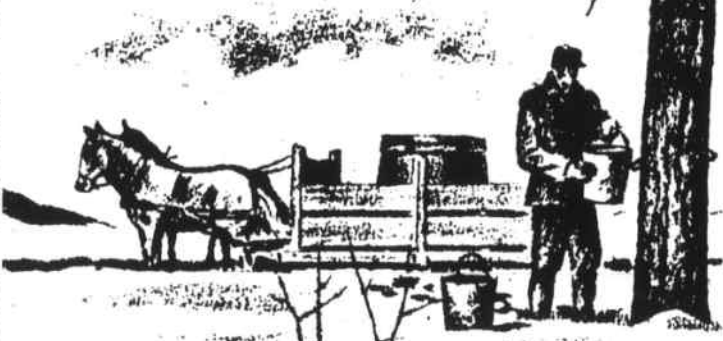

By Maria Lenhart

When Travis Shattuck bakes blueberry muffins or date bars or pumpkin pie or just about anything, she's likely to use a dash of maple syrup instead of molasses, honey, or sugar. That's not too surprising as the Shattuck family has been tapping and boiling the amber-colored nectar for seven generations.

Their early spring ritual is an unpredictable one at best. Last year was a poor one for the Shattucks, with the hundreds of trees they tapped yielding only 150 gallons. But this year, with plenty of warm days and cold nights to stimulate the sap flow, they are producing especially sweet syrup in much greater quantity.

On a recent weekend I went out to the Shattuck farm in southwestern New Hampshire to see just what is involved in getting the syrup from tree to breakfast table. After seeing all the work involved, I will never again think that the high price of syrup (anywhere from $20-$30 a gallon) is unreasonable.

On a bright, warm Saturday I accompanied Mrs. Shattuck, her 12-year-old son Adam, and some friends out to a neighbor's property at the foot of Mt. Monadnock to tap some sugar maples. Like many New England farmers, the Shattucks often tap trees on other people's land in exchange for some of the syrup they produced.

Tapping for sap, I discovered is hardly as romantic as the drawings of horse-drawn wagons and wooden sap buckets suggest. While a few buckets arched, of galvanized steel, not wood, it is mostly done by drilling holes in the trees and running the sap down in plastic tubing to a big metal drum.

After hammering in about 150 taps, we headed down to the drum where the collected sap was pumped into a holding tank on the back of the Shattucks' pickup. Once back at the farm, the tank was drained into another drum and then into a hose running right down to the sugarhouse.

Opening the door to the sugarhouse was akin to stepping into a maple-scented saunaclouds of steam rose from the evaporating machine as the bubbling sap was boiled down into syrup, about 40 gallons of sap for every gallon of syrup.

Daniel Shattuck, Travis's husband, was manning the evaporator, testing the syrup for the right consistency to be put in the filtering machine and then into sterile jugs. He handed me a small cup of the finished product, a hot, sweet, and delicious treat.

Mrs. Shattuck finds that in cooking, syrup can be used in the same quantity as honey or molasses. But even she acknowledges that most people would want to cook with the expensive syrup only in recipes where its addition would make a noticeable difference. She especially recommends using it in pumpkin pie or gingerbread where its delicate taste enhances the flavor of the spices.

Another good use of maple syrup is as a topping for ice cream, especially if it is boiled down to a thicker consistency and poured on while it's warm. At breakfast, besides on the usual pancakes it enhances the flavor of oatmeal, yogurt, and even grapefruit.

Following are a few recipes in which maple syrup adds its own unique flavor to the national Culinary Fellowship Program, Permanent Charity Fund of Boston, One Boston Place, Boston, Mass. 02106.

May is "National Arthritis month"

May is "National Arthritis Month," and I'd like to share with you some facts about this serious problem.

Over 31 million Americans suffer from arthritis, more than from any other disease. It affects one in seven people, one in three families. There are some 832,000 victims in our state alone, with over 394,765 in the metropolitan Boston area.

The suffering primarily affects patients and their families, but the economic impact of arthritis touches everyone. Lost wages and lost taxes, together with medical and workman's compensation payments, total some $14 billion each year. Arthritis is the leading cause of industrial absenteeism and second only to heart disease in cause of disability payments.

Despite such staggering statistics and prevalence, arthritis remains widely misunderstood. Perhaps the very fact that arthritis is so widespread contributes to the abundance of misconceptions about the disease. Nearly everyone, for example has heard of some home remedy or new "miracle" treatment of arthritis. However, how many people know that arthritis can be treated, and how to seek out those proper treatments?

It's true there is no cure for arthritis. Recent years, however, have seen tremendous advances in the treatment and control of the disease. The key is early diagnosis and prompt, proper medical treatment. People who wait for their symptoms to "go away" are often irreparably damaging their chances for successful control of their disease.

Too many advertising messages tend to portray arthritis as the inevitable minor aches and pains which accompany old age. In reality, arthritis can strike at any age, from infancy onward. There are as many as 250,000 children with arthritis, and other forms of the disease — such as rheumatoid arthritis, lupus and ankylosing spondylitis (spinal arthritis) — frequently strike young adults between the ages of 20 and 40. It isn't just a disease of the old, and it isn't just "minor aches and pains."

There is help for people with arthritis, and we at the Arthritis Foundation are dedicated to providing it.

Over 150 persons attended the Sherwin-Williams "Pro Show" recently including District Manager Bob Langley, (left) and John Murphy, the manager of the Sherwin-Williams store at Redstone Shopping Center in Stoneham. Mr. Murphy hosted the highly successful show at which the new "Super Paint" was introduced by Sherwin-Williams.

Over 150 local paint contractors, industrial and commercial maintenance managers attended Sherwin Williams' annual Pro Show at the Royal Hawaiian Restaurant, Burlington, Mass.

The Pro Show is a combination of exhibits, demonstrations and product information sessions on current and new products manufactured by the Sherman Williams Company.

John Murphy, a well-known resident of Woburn, manager of Sherwin Williams in Stoneham hosted the show. Murphy explained that the Pro Show was put on by three area Sherman Williams operations: Bedford, Lexington and Stoneham. These three stores cover all the communities in the Middlesex East Market.

Bob Langley, District Manager, made a special announcement at the outset of the evening. He announced "The secret is out, the secret is out of the can - and is really super. As a result of an extensive market research and development program Sherwin Williams introduced a new product, SUPER PAINT, on April 1." This new product, which comprises a line of premium quality interior and exterior latex paint, carries a 10 year warranty, Sherwin Williams' first. The intense marketing research included analysis of the industry competition and consumer requirements.

At the Pro Show the local tradesmen and maintenance personnel were treated to a variety of exhibits of applications equipment by suppliers to the Sherwin Williams company. Several door prizes were awarded throughout the evening program.

The high point of the evening was the delicious dinner served in a warm hospitable manner by the staff of the Royal Hawaiian under the supervision of the congenial manager, Chuck Yee. Murphy attributed the success of the meeting to the efforts of his co-chairman Walter Brown, manager of Lexington, Frank DeLosh, manager at Bedford, and to the staff of all three locations, and especially to the very interested attendees.

Retired Men's Club

Breakfast mixes with stocks

The Retired Men's Club of Wakefield had a busy morning, Wednesday, April 22, at the First Parish Congregational Church of Wakefield; an annual breakfast at 8:00 A.M. and speakers on "Investments" at 10:15 A.M.

Both speakers were from Merrill, Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith, Inc. from the Burlington office. They were introduced by 1st Vice President Richard Taylor. Mr. Harvey Albert spoke on "Bonds — A Time to Lock in on High Yields". He mentioned that corporate, government and municipal bonds are currently selling at their lowest prices and are showing their highest yields in recent history. It is expected that there will be a gradual downward movement of interest rates which would cause bonds to rise in value. Why should we expect interest rates to fall? The economy is weak, housing starts and car sales are as low as they were in the 1974-1975 recession. Businesses are holding back on new spending, afraid of slackening consumer demand. All of these factors contribute to less demand for new money and therefore lower interest rates. Reagan administration economic policies over a longer term basis should also allow interest rates to fall over the next few years. Bonds still currently offer the prospect of high yields for a continuing income, and capital gains, and tax savings.

Municipal bonds, tax exempt issues are also attractive now, especially for those in a 35 percent tax bracket. Usually longer term bonds will pay higher interest since the buyer has committed his funds for a longer period of uncertainty.

In concluding his part of the program on "Bonds", Mr. Albert mentioned that "overall, Merrill Lynch analysis believe this is an excellent time to lock in on historically high yields, and obtain the potential of a capital gain. Appropriate funds for bonds may come from money market funds, or bank accounts where there is no potential for appreciation of principal."

The next speaker was Mr. Richard Batten speaking on the stock market, "The Renaissance of Quality". He discussed areas that Merrill Lynch feels will be the most profitable for equity investments over the next several years. The stock market has done well since the break of 1973-1974. The outstanding performers have been the so-called secondary stocks, and over the last couple of years, the high technology and energy related issues. At their most recent high, the Dow Jones Industrials were 73 percent above their 1974 low and still rising. Many of the market favorites of the last few years have scored enormous gains and now sell at lofty price earnings multiples. Large capitalization stocks as measured by the Dow Jones Industrial Average continued to achieve superior performances and went on to a new peak in 1973. Blue Chip growth stocks were mentioned that carry the highest rating of investment grade. Earnings for more than half have increased at an annual rate of 15 percent or better for the last five years.

Mr. Batten had much more to say on stocks but in closing remarks mentioned that those who believe the Reagan Administration program will not work will want to have a portfolio structure consisting of high cash reserves, and holdings in gold, foreign securities, foreign currencies, commodities, oil and natural resources.

Both Mr. Batten and Mr. Albert received a round of applause for their informative speeches and answered questions from the floor.

The Annual Breakfast began at 8 A.M., cooked and served by many members of the Retired Men's Group who arrived at dawn. Total present were 165 members and those coming in later for the regular meeting brought the total attendance to 292 members. President George Flewelling introduced the guests at the head table: Dr. John P. Robertson, Pastor of the First Parish Congregational Church who gave the invocation, the speakers Mr. Harry Albert and Mr. Richard Batten of Merrill Lynch, Robert Mathias, Treasurer, Charles Strauss, Assistant Treasurer, Malcolm C. Choate, Secretary, Alfred Webber, Assistant Secretary and Richard Ashley from Winchester.

When all members assembled after the breakfast meeting and were welcomed by the President, six visitors were asked to stand and be recognized: Chester Hopkins and Edmond I. Kennedy of Reading; Floyd R. Judd of Melrose; Robert J. Rich of Wakefield; Richard "Dick" Ashley of Winchester; and Joseph T. Callahan of Woburn.

The Birthday List was read by Robert Francis. Thirteen members having birthdays since the last meeting were present. Laughlin McKenzie, a devoted member, was recognized for having had his 90th birthday.

Joe Whiting of the Sick and Visiting Committee gave a report of members in hospitals, nursing homes and recuperating at home. The door prize presented by Gus Seavey was a box of cigars won by Lloyd Schafner. Larry Stockwell performed his usual well received role as story-teller.

Chester Card, band leader thanked the group for their response to the band's performance at the previous meeting. There were two women in the band, bass and baritone. (Is this the Men's Club?) The band now accepts women players, any brass or woodwind players, mentoo.

Roger Callahan played on the harmonica several Irish songs, including "When Irish Eyes are Smiling", "Wearing of the Green" and "Danny Boy".

Ray Smart speaking for the Camera Club mentioned a total attendance of 90 at the Ladies Day meeting, April 21, which featured movies by the Guerettes on their 1980 trip to China. The Camera Club met on May 5th with George Jung showing colored slides of gardens in the United States featuring Longwood Gardens.

Paul Richmond gave his "Thought for the Day". Henry Murphy thanked the breakfast workers for all their efforts for the morning. He also reported the names of officers nominated for 1981-1982.

Bob Sproul reported a full attendance for the Mystic Seaport trip April 27th. The Nova Scotia Trip in June has a waiting list.

This was a full meeting for the Retired Men's Club, fully enjoyed by all from breakfast through the speakers.

Trader Vic refuses to fade away

By Ward Morehouse III

Victor J. Bergeron, better known as Trader Vic, is a man of many talents, legends, philosophies - and enormous success.

He is head of the Trader Vic's restaurant chain, or as he prefers to call it "group," which he started in Oakland, Calif., in 1930 with a borrowed $500.

Last year, as the recession cut into budgets for "eating out," his 21 restaurants girdling the globe - from New York to Dallas to San Francisco to Munich - registered sales of nearly $50 million, up more than 15 percent from the previous year.

"We're always hoping we're going to have one more," says Keith Hardman, vice-chairman of Trader Vic's and former manager of seven of the 21 restaurants, restaurants noted almost as much for their decor as their unique brand and blend of Polynesian, Tahitian, Hawaiian, and Chinese cooking. Exotic artifacts such as dugout canoes, paddles, and palm fronds festoon the restaurants.

One of the places "the Trader" would most like to expand in is China. But to date there are no active negotiations in this direction. In any case, most of Mr. Bergeron's chefs are Chinese.

In an interview on a rare trip east to New York - he lives in San Francisco - Mr. Bergeron said, "Our food is not 100 percent Chinese. It's a Chinese adaptation to the American taste and that's why people like it." But his own favorite food, which he says he eats every Saturday, is "sauerkraut - Chinese-style. You know, the Chinese originated sauerkraut."

His original restaurant was called Hinky Dinks. It was known not only for good food but its promotion gimmicks. "On Friday nights I gave away half a roast chicken to anyone who came in," he recalled, "and to promote business I called it amateur night...Crowds of a hundred, sometimes 200 people would crowd into Hinky Dinks for amateur night."

Hinky Dinks measured all of 22 feet by 26 feet. Today, his restaurants encompass many tens of thousands of square feet.

Back in 1930 Mr. Bergeron devised another "trick" to lure customers. "I had an egg-flipping trick when someone ordered ham and eggs," he said, "I'd put the ham on the griddle, the eggs in the frying pan. Right over the middle of the stove was a big beam that went across the ceiling and kept the sides of the building up. Well, I'd flip the egg out of the frying pan, over the beam and catch it back in the frying pan. Well, almost always, but from the butter that dripped down from the beam, I must have missed about 25 or 30 eggs over the years."

But it wasn't long before Hinky Dinks became Trader Vic's - the name was suggested by his wife - and ham and eggs gave way to Chinese food.

Mr. Bergeron next built into his restaurant a feature that has remained all through the years: a "Chinese oven," fueled by oak or hickory wood, in which food is cooked. Now, these ovens are highly visible fixture in all Trader Vic's restaurants.

Although Mr. Hardman is chief executive officer of Trader Vic's and Mr. Bergeron is technically "retired", Mr. Bergeron stays in constant contact with his network of restaurants by phone and occasionally in person. His associates say that he is forever patting his chefs on the back - and blasting those who fall short of their own high standards. He's also extremely active as a sculpture and landscape artist. Each year his art, sold at the restaurants, grosses over $100,000.

And while many of the top restaurant critics have made it a habit to bypass the "grand old dame" of Polynesian cooking in their reviews for trendy newcomers, Trader Vic's clientele has remained enormously loyal over the years. On some weekends in his San Francisco flagship restaurant there are long lines. In New York, on almost any night of the week, his restaurant in the Plaza Hotel caters to celebrities of the brightest magnitude. Former President Richard Nixon is also a frequent patron.

But success, although making him a multimillionaire, has done little else to change him. He says he enjoys eating best, not in one of the 21 Trader Vic's restaurants, or any other restaurant for that matter, but at home with his wife.

And as opposed to all the elegance money can buy, he loves being outdoors on a lake, or beside a stream, or in the middle of a 300-million year old canyon in Colorado better than in the plushest of hotels.

There's something else about Trader Vic that makes him stand out. From early boyhood, he's had only one leg but has never had the time or inclination for self-pity. Although he won't talk about it, he's helped numerous so-called "handicapped" people realize that the only thing that can stop them from succeeding in life is their own lack of initiative.

He is no more ashamed of having only one leg than he is of his prices, which, in comparison with many restaurants, are considered high. But people can always afford quality, he insists, and he personally taste-tests many of his restaurants' new dishes.

"I have always enjoyed learning and trying new things," he says, "and I have found over the years that everything I do is more fun if I make money doing it."

As for his paintings, he adds: "It's not just the money, but if people are willing to pay for my paintings, or my jewelry, it makes me feel that they take it seriously and really like it."

Avoid a hotel holocaust

Before the MGM Grand Hotel fire last fall, most people gave more thought to tipping the bellhop than they did to hotel fire safety. But the MGM fire, in which 84 died, the Las Vegas Hilton fire that killed eight, and the Stouffer's Inn blaze in which 26 people lost their lives, have all raised an important question: If you were in a hotel during a fire, would you know what to do?

This isn't just idle speculation, the odds of being in a hotel fire are greater than you think. Each month, there are roughly 1,000 fires in hotels and motels across the country, according to the National Fire Protection Association. That's why for frequent travelers — from the lone businessman or woman to the people who plan meetings and the groups who attend them — fire safety should be as important as a convenient location or a luxurious atmosphere.

Convention and meeting planners in particular need to pay attention to fire safety. "The most important thing," according to Lt. John Halloran of the Chicago Fire Department's Bureau of Fire Prevention, "is to make sure that all exits are well-marked and reachable." He adds, "luckily most hotel meeting rooms are on the lower floors, which makes for each exiting."

In fact, for either large or small groups, the same rule applies: street-level meeting rooms are best because those are the easiest to evacuate. Rooms above the seventh floor are more hazardous because fire ladders may only reach that high. Hotel basements are also bad for meetings because, in case of a fire, you must climb the stairs to get out. You can only go up — the same direction the smoke and flames will be traveling.

Those in charge of a meeting, Halloran believes, should take a few minutes while the room is being setup to familiarize themselves with all the exits. Not only should they make sure that the hotel's floor plan is visibly posted, but they should also walk through the entire escape route.

All exit signs should be brightly lit and the exit doors should open easily. In a fire, the extra minutes needed to force open an exit door could prove fatal.

Even if all the doors open, the hallways and stairwells may still be blocked. In most meeting facilities, storage space is at a premium. Extra furniture may be stacked out of the way in or near the fire exits. Even the way the room is arranged may also block the way out. Not only do speakers' platforms, decorative screens and curtains sometimes hide secondary doors, but cramped quarters, where chairs and tables are squeezed tightly together, may make aisle space virtually nonexistent. Each of these situations can multiply confusion if the fire alarm sounds.

Ask the hotel staff

Service is usually a big selling point for hotels. The hotel staff should not only cater your luncheon menu, but also advise you on fire safety procedures. The MGM Grand Hotel fire has raised the "fire consciousness" of most hotels, Lt. Halloran believes. Some now send their staffs to special fire safety seminars, such as one workshop for 110 staff members from area hotels recently held at the Fire Academy in Chicago. Many others are publicizing their fire protection efforts by outfitting each room with smoke detectors and tips on fire safety.

After you check the escape route, ask the hotel staff to remove any furniture that could get in the way, and also to point out the location of the automatic sprinklers and the smoke detectors. Ideally, all large meeting rooms and exhibition halls, as well as atrium lobbies and other wide open spaces, should be protected with sprinklers. Other than that, comments Lt. Halloran, it's unreasonable to expect a meeting planner to be overly concerned with a hotel's construction. He reasons that no matter how safe a hotel's structure, the biggest problem is with the contents — the furniture, carpeting and wallcoverings which will quickly catch on fire. Still, if at all possible, the person in charge of a large convention should consult fire safety experts if there are questions about a hotel's fire safety.

If you're in charge of a conference you should also know where the nearest fire extinguisher is located since you may wish to control a small "wastepaperbasket-type" fire yourself — but only after you've already called the fire department. Also find out what the fire alarm sounds like, and who on the hotel staff calls the fire department.

Many hotels, in an effort not to disturb their guests, may not call the fire department until they first verify whether or not there is a fire; then try to put it out themselves. Key people should be assigned the job of calling the fire department on an outside line first, then alerting the hotel's switchboard operator on the house phone.

Most fires start at night

Most exhibitions, conferences, and meetings take place during business hours. But most fires happen at night, when a hotel has only a skeleton staff on duty. That's why overnight guests need to pay even more attention to hotel fire safety. You can greatly increase your chances of surviving a fire by following these tips, adapted from material published by the National Safety Council.

Preparation for a hotel fire should begin before you leave home. It's a good idea to pack a flashlight along with extra pairs of shoes and socks. A small flashlight won't take up much room in the suitcase, and could be invaluable for guiding you through a dark and smoky hall. For an extra measure of security, also take along a portable smoke detector. A regular, battery-operated model, slung over a hanger at the top of the door to your room will do the job. Just remember not to place the detector near the air conditioner or in front of an air supply duct. The added fresh air flow can keep smoke-filled air from reaching inside the chamber to set off the alarm.

Check the exits

After you check in, it's essential that you take a few minutes to walk through the escape route. Neglecting this step may kill you. At a recent hotel fire, seven bodies were found in a large closet that the victims apparently mistook for an exit.

First, as soon as you put your luggage down, walk down the corridor and find those exits. Count the number of doorways between your room and the nearest one. Notice which side of the hall the door is on and whether anything — a soda or ice machine, for example — is in the way.

Then make sure that the exit is usable. Notice how the lock opens. If the lock trips the fire alarm, that's as far as you can go. But if you can open the door without turning in a false alarm, do so and peer down the stairway to make sure that it's clear. Check to see if the door is locked from the stairway side. If it is, once you enter the stairway, you will only be able to exit at the ground floor or perhaps on the roof.

Next, scout out your room. If smoke fills the corridor and cuts off your escape, you'll have to return to your room and stay put or look for an alternate escape route. The window is the obvious candidate. See if it opens and try the latches to see how they work. Also look to see what's outside. You may be only a few feet from the ground, or, if you are on an upper floor, there may be a roof or deck within safe dropping distance — usually no more than two stories. Remember, though, distances may be deceiving. These ledges usually look closer than they really are.

Last, put your room key close to where you sleep so that you can find it easily. Place it on the nightstand, or in a pocket of your clothes.

Getting out

In the event of a fire, you will probably be awakened by an alarm, a phone call, the smell of smoke or the sound of yelling out in the hall. Here's what you should do.

Grab your key, roll out of bed and crawl to the door. Don't stand, even if the smoke doesn't seem so bad. You'll probably still be half asleep, and until you know how bad the fire is, it's best to keep low. Smoke and deadly gases rise, and the air even five feet off the floor could already be filled with deadly carbon monoxide.

Gov. Edward J. King presided at the signing by UOP Inc. and the first three communities to participate in the Northeastern Mass. Resource Recovery Project. Back row (left to right) Roberta M. Baratta, Executive Vice President of UOP Inc.; John Bewick, Secretary of Environmental Affairs; John Graham, North Carlisle's Chairman of the Board of Selectmen; Alford Peckham, Carlisle's Chairman of the Board of Selectmen; and Dr. Jack Hunter, MRI President, the UOP subsidiary which will own and operate the North Andover plant to convert solid waste to energy.

Further, you may need to save your eyes and lungs for later.

Next, feel the door near the top before you open it. If the door or knob is hot — don't open it. If the door is cold, open it carefully, and be ready to slam it shut if smoke pours in.

Check the hall. If it's clear, stand up, close the door behind you, and walk to the fire exit. Again, if there is any trace of smoke, crawl, staying close to the wall so you can count the doorways.

Never take the elevator. The elevator shaft behaves like a giant chimney, sucking smoke and heat upward. Plus, smoke and heat may affect the elevator controls. At one hotel fire recently, the heat was so intense it melted the hoist cables. Instead, when you reach the stairway, hold firmly onto the guardrail and walk down. Do not run.

Sometimes, smoke will cool after it rises, stacking itself in layers in the stairway, with the heaviest on the bottom. Don't try to run through it. Instead, if the fire or smoke is thick at lower levels, turn right around and walk back up to the roof. When you reach the roof, prop open the door to let the smoke out of the stairway and to keep yourself from being locked out. Go to the side of the building facing the wind (use the old reliable wet-finger test). Sit and wait for help.

Staying put

If your room door is hot, or if the smoke is dense in the hall, you must stay put in your room. Here's what you should do.

Don't panic. You can stay in your room and still survive the fire. Don't be like the man at the MGM Grand Hotel fire who panicked and, half remembering some fragment of fire safety, stuck his head in the toilet bowl and nearly drowned. He lived to laugh at himself — but you may not be so lucky.

Don't jump. You may be able to drop to the ground safely if you are on the first or second floor. Any higher up, though, and you should stay put. Although some people may survive a jump from 35 feet up, they are usually very seriously hurt. In a fire in Brazil a few years ago, 40 people who jumped from windows were all killed. Ironically, 36 jumped after the fire had been put out.

Let somebody know you're there. If the phone works, call for help. Don't rely on the hotel switchboard. It may be swamped with calls. Instead, hang a bedsheet out the window to signal firefighters.

Get fresh air. Flip on the bathroom fan to vent the smoke in your room. Then open the top and bottom sections of the window about three inches. This lets fresh air in at the bottom and smoke out at the top. If the air seems clear outside, make a tent over your head with a wet blanket and open the bottom half of the window just enough to stick your head out. If the window won't open, think twice about breaking it with a chair or dresser drawer. You won't be able to close it again to keep out the smoke, and you may cut yourself, or people on the ground below with the flying glass. If heavy smoke and flames are rising up outside, keep the window shut.

Fill the bathtub. You can use the water for firefighting. Wet towels and sheets and stuff them around the cracks in the doorway and any place else where smoke can seep in. If the door and walls get hot, bail water on them with the ice bucket.

In the end, no matter how "fireproof" the hotel, or how well-trained the staff, your best protection is yourself. If you know what to do in a hotel fire, chances are, you'll be one of the first on the scene to watch the firefighters at work — from a safe distance.

List at Tufts

Area businesses and organizations seeking full- or part-time help are invited to list job opportunities with a new student employment service at Tufts University in Medford.

Tufts' Job Location and Development Program, a component of Tufts' financial aid office, will serve as a clearinghouse for part-time employment during the academic year and full-time employment during the summer by seeking out job opportunities, keeping current employment listings and referring students to employers, according to Bernard Pekala, Tufts' student employment coordinator.

The service will be available to all Tufts students regardless of eligibility for financial aid at Tufts, Pekala notes.

Employers wishing to list a job opportunity may call Pekala at 628-5000 extension 316 or 384.

What to do with insurance at retirement

By Robert Edwards

Singles and couples usually arrive at retirement with a mixed bag of life insurance. Question - what to do with it?

More and more persons with cash value locked into their insurance are opting out. The primary reason for having insurance - protection of family or other dependents - has long since disappeared for them. At retirement, insurance may be needed to provide quick cash to pay estate taxes, final expenses, and outstanding debts. In today's inflationary environment, retirees need more income, and one source could be insurance cash values. Following are several available options:

- One couple, writing to "Moneywise," with loans against their cash-value policies, are well below the estate value where federal taxes would be payable. They could cash out their policy and pay off the loans and accrued interest. The remaining lump sum cash, most of which would be nontaxable as a return of paid-in capital, could be stashed in a money market mutual fund where it would earn more income than the increase in cash value if the policy continued.

- A person or couple with considerable cash value insurance should look at potential estate tax liabilities. A single with a net worth of around $200,000 could expect to be close. A couple with a net worth in the range of $400,000 or more should set up a plan for estate tax payments. For higher estate valuations, insurance remains the one best way to assure ready cash for settlement expenses and for paying federal and possibly state estate taxes.

If you own more than one policy, determine if more than one is necessary. Generally, I recommend not keeping insurance policies into retirement unless cash is needed for estate settlement. To avoid continuing premiums, convert a policy into paid-up insurance. The face value of the policy may be more than the paid-up value, but you avoid future payments and conserve cash for spending.

- If you take a lump sum for the cash value and accumulated dividends, if any, the policy is canceled. Generally, the cash will yield more income than if it remains in the policy. Consider the additional premiums being paid as a cost for insurance between the policy's cash surrender value and its face value. Often this difference is small after 20 or more years, and the yearly premium amounts to expensive coverage. You should plan to invest the lump sum cash in something better than an insured savings account. Money market mutual funds are a good choice now. You assume more risk if you invest the lump sum in stocks, but the potential payoff will likely be better long term. Diversifying into a variety of investments, including a small collection of gold and silver coins, could reduce your risks from various directions.

- Converting the cash surrender value into an annuity is one possibility that should probably be avoided unless you opt for a Swiss annuity. Inflation has clobbered the idea of a fixed income for life, as each year the fixed number of dollars buys fewer goods and services. If you wish to start spending accumulated capital, as you do with an annuity, consider your own program. Mentioned previously in "Moneywise" are capital withdrawal charts that help you to plan how much cash you can draw from invested capital over a variable number of years according to the average yield from your investments. These three pages are available for 50 cents plus a self-addressed, stamped envelope from Moneywise, Box 752, Mercer Island, Wash. 98040.

- A cash withdrawal plan is similar to a self-directed program of spending capital, but the cash value remains with the insurance company. Instead of leaving the cash where it earns a paltry rate, you'll be better off to withdraw the cash as a lump sum and put it into several no-load mutual funds with a similar regular payment monthly. Funds keyed to income rather than growth would be the key.

Add potholes to roadway of life

By George B. Merry

Inflation-stretched state highway funds are receiving a lot of attention in legislatures across America.

Within recent weeks at least five states - Idaho, Kentucky, Massachusetts, South Dakota, and Utah - have increased their gasoline taxes to raise money for highway maintenance.

Similar moves are afoot elsewhere in more than two dozen legislatures from Florida to Alaska.

It is increasingly uncertain, however, how much additional help may be on the way in 1981 since several legislative sessions have already wound up for the year and a number of others are in their final days or weeks.

While rising road-construction and upkeep costs are the major cause of shrinking highway funds, gasoline conservation has contributed to the situation with reduced driving (and cars that get better mileage) resulting in less motor fuel used and consequently slimmer tax receipts.

Thus far, more than 60 proposals to boost motor fuel levies have been under consideration in all but four states.

Two-thirds of the measures are still pending, including ones in Arizona, Missouri, Montana, and Tennessee, which have made it through either the state senate or house.

In Missouri, for example two different gas-tax hike bills are in the works. The state Senate has approved a flat 2 cents a gallon increase, effective July 1. Similarly, the House would boost that levy from 7 cents a gallon to 9 this year, but would also add another penny a gallon in mid-1982.

Vermont lawmakers have been split on whether to raise the motor fuels tax from the current 9 cents a gallon or to tie the levy to a percentage of the retail price, a solution favored by Gov. Richard A. Snelling.

The Vermont House has passed a flat 2 cent boost, which would produce only about half the additional $70 million sought by the state's chief executive. Alternatives under Senate consideration include shifting the costs of state troopers and registry of motor vehicle personnel from the state highway fund to the general fund. The general fund would be boosted by expansion of the state's 3 percent sales tax to cover motor fuels.

Arizona, Missouri, Vermont, and Tennessee are among the 22 states that have not raised motor fuels levies in the past six years.

Since January 1978, 23 states have increased their gasoline taxes once and several, including those tying their levies to wholesale or retail motor fuel prices, more than once.

The recent hikes in both Kentucky and Massachusetts, for example, resulted from such administrative adjustments rather than direct lawmaker action. The Massachusetts tax, which prior to April 1 had been 9.8 cents a gallon, now is 11.5 cents a gallon. The Kentucky increase was from 9 to 9.5 cents a gallon.

Two of the nation's three newly enacted gas tax laws - those in Idaho and Utah - involve 2 cent-a-gallon boosts, effective July 1.

The penny increase in South Dakota, on the other hand, began on April 1. It is also perhaps the most controversial since a portion of the additional revenue is earmarked not for highways but for running a newly acquired state freight railroad.

A suit challenging the diversion of gasoline tax revenues for nonhighway-related purposes has been brought before the state's supreme court by the South Dakota Auto Club, a division of the American Automobile Association.

The tax hike from 12 to 13 cents a gallon is projected to net $5.2 million a year in new revenue, some $2.7 million of which would go toward operating the rail freight line. The latter is for the shipment of grain, South Dakota's main agricultural product. State officials contend that without the rail system highways would have to be used to haul grain resulting in higher transportation costs and a faster wearing out of roads.

A three-year temporary increase in the state's sales tax has financed the purchase of abandoned rail rights of way.

At 13 cents a gallon, South Dakota now has the second highest levy of this type in the nation, exceeded only by 13.6 percent in neighboring Nebraska where the rate is pegged to a percentage of the wholesale motor fuel price.

Idaho's tax increase will bring the levy from 9.5 to 11.5 cents a gallon and net an estimated $8.7 million in additional highway funds during the first year. This, according to state transportation department officials, is only about one-fifth of what is needed and less than the $16 million sought by Gov. John V. Evans.

The Utah gas tax increase from 9 cents to 11 cents a gallon is projected to yield an additional $15 million for the highway fund. Revenue during the 12 months ending June 30 is running some $9 million short of what had been anticipated last July.

Tab hits $5.66

The pothole tab now is $5.6 billion a year without counting wasted gas.

Almost every driver has hit a pothole at one time or another and too often has had to get the wheels of his car realigned or repairs done to the brake, steering, or suspension systems as a result.

All told, this year motorists will shell out about $3.5 billion to repair brake, steering, and suspension systems that are damaged by driving over cracked or broken pavement and another $2.1 billion for tire wear and damage, estimates The Road Information Program (TRIP).

This doesn't take into account the estimated $13.6 billion in added fuel bills caused by driving over poor roads, the cost of accidents caused by potholes, or the cost of such common things as lost wheel covers and bent rims.

State highway departments will spend about $300 million this year just to fill potholes, an increase of 17 percent from a year ago. And because the patches often are temporary, many of those potholes will reappear in the same places next year.

"Potholes are really symptomatic of a larger ailment," says TRIP chairman H. W. Reece.

"More than 42 percent of all paved roads in this country suffer from cracks, bumps, and broken pavement," he asserts.

Savings bank struggles to avoid squeeze

By Ron Scherer

Each week, your local corner savings and loan association has watched the backing for its assets walk out the door as savers move their nesteggs into money market mutual funds, which pay higher interest.

If market interest rates remain high, this time next year that institution may have a different name after merging with several other banks in the neighborhood. The merger is but one technique the thrift industry is using - at the government's urging - to try to keep from going the way of Chrysler.

Last month the US League of Savings Associations reported the nation's savings and loans had a record net outflow of $1.7 billion. Many thrift institutions are mired in red ink as the outflows combine with low-yielding mortgages to squeeze their earnings.

Even the high liquidity of commercial banks could be stretched if customers take large portions of the $75 billion in money market certificates due over the next two months and switch them to money market funds.

In order to prevent a disaster type of scenario from developing at the thrifts, federal banking regulators have proposed remedies. John G. Heimann, outgoing controller of the currency, suggests that the government allow interstate savings bank mergers and the addition of some capital.

However, there are nearly as many opinions on what should be done to help the thrifts as there are banks. Many bankers believe money market funds should be muzzled. But this finds little support in Washington.

Rather, the Reagan administration believes deregulation is best solution. US Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan noted in New York this week, "We are moving with deliberate haste" to deregulate the industry so it can compete with the money market funds for deposits. He quickly added that deregulation wouldn't come until the thrifts are in better financial shape to compete.

Saul Klamen, president of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks, says what the thrifts need most is time.

"We are expecting the economy to improve," he states, "and the rates of inflation to moderate some. So, it's a matter of buying time until our lower yielding assets run off and we can get the deposit flows to acquire higher yielding assets."

Mr. Klamen suggests allowing troubled thrifts to borrow from the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC), which has reserves of $12 billion. Klamen says this should be ample to take care of the thrifts over the current period without putting "any special tax on the Treasury."

He estimates that the "maximum loss to the mutual savings banks this year could be between $500 million and $1 billion." At the same time, the mutual savings banks have $12 billion of reserves to back their $175 billion in assets. The savings and loan industry has deposits of more than $750 billion.

John W. Raber, chairman and chief executive officer of the Green Point Savings Bank in Brooklyn, says savings banks "are not looking for a bail-out, but time to work out of the problems created by regulation and legislation."

These rules, he says, kept the lid on the mortgage rates banks could charge while allowing the rates paid to savers to increase.

Today, he says, the average portfolio yields about 8.25 percent, while current mortgage rates are 15 percent. At the same time, the bank pays depositors between 12 and 14 percent for its money. For an institution such as the Green Point, which invests 75 to 80 percent of its assets in mortgages, it takes time to increase this yield. However, in Green Point's case, an increase of about half a percent on its investment portfolio adds $4.5 million to its income.

The government has rescued some savings and loans encrusted with too many low-interest mortgages. Last year, the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation shelled out $1.3 billion to help 31 failing savings and loans merge into stronger institutions. It mainly bought the low yielding mortgages.

In spite of the headlines about the savings banks' problems, they have some underlying strengths. Standard & Poor's Corporation, a rating agency, recently reaffirmed its rating of A-1 for 28 thrift institutions while only downgrading six of them. The agency notes that in spite of their earnings problems, thrifts have excellent asset quality and new flexibility to attract deposits. In addition, these banks offer "personal touches," such as friendly managers and neighborhood get-togethers that money market funds don't.

News ServiceWinter
injured

People aren't the only ones who suffer through the cold, dry, bitterness of winter in New England, plants do too! This spring, trees, shrubs and woody plants have shown injury due to extreme winter conditions. Here are some characteristics of the causes and effects of this winter on plants:

Winter injured plants usually have brownish or reddish dead areas in the margins, tips or veins of leaves. Evergreens may have dead leaf or needle tips and the buds on fruit trees and flowering shrubs may be killed. This injury is caused by lack of water, excessive wind or sun, and severe cold temperatures. Signs of winter injury are characteristic this spring on plants such as: Holly, Forsythia, Hemlock, Laurel, Azalea and Rhododendron.

If your trees and shrubs show indication of winter injury, it is advisable to fertilize lightly and delay pruning of dead areas until May or June - until growth begins, then prune if necessary to remove dead wood.

So if you are wondering why your yard plants aren't totally green and lush like most springs, think back to the bitter winter we had, plants suffered too!

This message comes to you from the Middlesex County Extension Service, 105 Everett Street, Concord, Mass. 01742.

Get the basics
- at college-

Perhaps you would like to attend college, but have not yet earned a high school diploma. Or you may have graduated but simply feel unprepared to compete academically at the college level.

In either case, the Lowell Campus of Newbury Junior College is offering an eight-week Basic Studies program this summer, with concentrated skills review in both English and Math beginning May 18. Classes meet Monday and Wednesday evenings from 6:00 p.m. to 10:00 p.m.

After successfully completing the two courses, participants are qualified for initial acceptance to any of Newbury's 27 associate degree and certificate programs. While the courses are not specifically designed for GED preparation, many students have found them to be especially helpful in attaining their high school equivalency certificates.

Area residents seeking information regarding Newbury's Basic Studies program should call full-time campus Director Betty Soifert, Lowell Campus, 530 Stevens Street, at 454-0471.

Renewal form not all that routine

Some drivers consider filling out the renewal application for their auto insurance a nuisance, especially if they have been insured with a company for many years. There are many, however, who take this opportunity to remove an inexperienced driver, or one who has left the household, from their policy in order that they may enjoy a lower premium.

The Insurance Information Institute says the insurance company is following state regulations in sending you a renewal form. It also gives you the chance to drop coverage you may not need and benefit from added savings.

For all policies subject to merit rating, the company or agent may mail to the insured a form approved by the insurance commissioner to secure complete and accurate driver information for all operators of the vehicle insured by the company.

The form may also request other information as may be necessary to properly rate and classify the policy for the ensuing renewal period. The form must be sent and returned at least every other year.

If no operator data is submitted to the company, within 30 days prior to expiration the company may cancel the renewal policy. Also, the company may check with the Merit Rating Board if differences are found in data reported to the company and that in the renewal questionnaire.

Some companies may elect to require a deposit premium on renewal. This amount can be based on the present year's rates if rates for the following year are not yet set. This required deposit can be no more than 30 percent of the applicable annual premium. However, if the applicant has been in default in payment of premium during the preceding 24 months, the entire policy premium charges are payable in advance.

Life insurance (from S-11)

them. Or, should I sell it, pay the capital gains tax and give them the cash?

Since you are single, you can offset the full value of the 40 acres for federal income tax purposes with a credit that protects an estate up to $175,625. The value of the land is stepped up from its basis of $300 per acre to current market value when figuring your estate's value. Thus, by turning the land over to your daughters as part of your estate, you avoid the capital gain tax that would be payable if you sold the property. Later, if your daughters sell the property, their basis will be the stepped-up value, and they will pay a far lesser capital gain tax if any. Your daughters will be liable for an inheritance tax on the value they receive individually. As long as the problems of running the farm, taxes, and possible losses of income are not overly troublesome, I suggest not selling but allowing the property to pass to your daughters through your will.

Inflation influences design trends

NEW YORK (UPI) — Inflation has a lot to do with design trends, says interior designer Mario Buatta.

"People are spending more time at home and more money on their homes. Old buildings are being restored and there's a return to tradition, even among young people."

"There's even a return to curtains, supplanting the bare window treatment of recent years," Buatta said at a preview of the Decorator Show House sponsored annually by the Kips Bay Boys' Club as a fund raiser for its youth program. "It's a way of conserving heat — and money."

This year 19 top interior designers transformed a vacant neo-Georgian Manhattan mansion into a decorators' paradise. It is open to the public through May 17. Admission $5.

Buatta's sitting room at the show has a cozy English country house feeling with Morocco red-glazed walls and an English needlepoint rug that ties together soft colors in chinoiserie chintzes and other upholstery.

His window treatment includes an elaborately draped valance in the Regency 1811/1820 taste.

Kevin McNamara uses Regency raspberry walls and scroll-armed Regency chairs to go with a curving, puffy-backed Art Deco sofa of his own design. Carved Irish consoles painted white, an American Gothic book cabinet of the Regency period housing stereo equipment, a dark lacquer cocktail table in the Chinese style and Chinese porcelains complete the room.

from floor to ceiling. Mirrors can be used behind open shelves on storage walls or behind shelves with collections. A view outside the house treated in the right way can extend space visually and provide a pleasant view. Where there is a large window or sliding glass door, a redwood or cypress baffle can be placed a few feet away and covered with plants and greenery to create an extended space.

Living in less space is a creative challenge. You will find it has many advantages such as less furniture to buy, less area to clean, less to paint and repair and less space to heat and cool. Less can be better in this time of high inflation. Contact your local Cooperative Extension agent for additional suggestions for making the most of your living space.

"It's a return to elegance, comfort and color, away from lucite and steel," McNamara said. "We're using less French furniture than we have in years, probably because good pieces are hard to find. Early 19th century English and American furnishings and paintings fascinate people today and are much more available in the market."

Art Deco objects from the 1920s and '30s continue to be a strong influence in accessories, second only to Chinese touches of small furniture, porcelains, rugs, and wallpapers.

Conchita Legendre, Noel Jeffrey and Harvey Herman created sleekly contemporary rooms that highlight bleached wood in furnishings and flooring, polished brass and gunmetal, and pastels ranging from celadon greens to dusty roses.

Miss Legendre's "game suite" has plum colored walls, black lacquer gaming tables, overstuffed furniture in velvety beige suede and a tie-dyed brown and beige canvas rug.

Jeffrey's all-white drawing room features a curving double couch and Art Deco sconces in grape green glass.

Herman's living room is dominated by a large blond lacquer stereo cabinet, an Art Deco glass-topped supper table, chaises with metallic bases, fireplace tiles with metallic finish and black lacquer Chinese chairs. The walls are painted in imitation of travertine limestone.

Walls, in fact, get a great deal of attention. Many are treated with striated glazes or hung with padded fabric.

Ellen McCluskey created a drawing room in the grand 18th century manner with handpainted Chinese wallpaper panels of birds and flowering plants but used contemporary chairs in a carded woolen fabric in pinkish-beige tones.

Nelson Ferlita's dining room features white walls, black lacquer accents and an octagonal table with smoky glass top and polished metal base.

In spite of the contemporary look, Ferlita chose 18th century Danish gilt dining chairs with tooled leather backs and seats.

"I like touches of the past in contemporary rooms," he said. "Our history as a country is rather short. It's good to go back and use antique furniture you can think off as works of sculpture in spite of their utility. If everything in a room is modern, it's boring."

One of the most unusual rooms is John Saladino's oversized bathroom. An old-fashioned sarcophagus-sized tub sits smack center on an ashwood plinth. A motorized brass punkah above is designed to keep the bather cool.

Eric Bernard's "retreat" is a dark-tiled computerized cave containing exercise equipment, a print-out machine for receiving the New York Times and an electronic revolving clothes rack like that used by dry cleaners.

Of the bedrooms, Renny B. Saltzman's is the most restful, with a brass four-poster draped in a Chinese print, dark brown Korean chests against beige walls, pastel Indian dhurrie rug and a pale green fireplace. A tiny adjoining sitting room is worked in Wedgwood blue and jonquil yellow with one of those ubiquitous Chinese touches — a barrel-shaped porcelain garden seat pinching as a table.

The decorators have not overlooked comfort. The chaise longue turned up in almost half the rooms in both single and two-piece versions — the latter dividing into an arm chair and hassock.

DESIGNER Nelson Ferlita created this dining room of white walls and black lacquer accents with an octagonal table, smoky glass top and polished metal base complimented by chairs of tooled leather seats and backs. This is one of many rooms designed by interior decorators for the Decorator Show House. (UPI)

Maximize your living space

Making a small area look bigger is the key to comfortable living in less space. Today, more people are moving into apartments, townhouses, condominiums, mobile homes and smaller houses. Good organization of small living spaces can be effectively accomplished through careful planning so there is enough space for everyone.

It's important to consider each person who will be living in the home. Mary Mulvey Williams, Extension Home Economist with the Middlesex County Extension Service advises. Since each individual feels differently about living space, a home should have both public and private areas. Walls, floors, ceiling and furniture all take part in the organization, along with added pattern, color and texture.

Here are some suggestions to maximize your living space: When considering walls, limit the number of different colors used from room to room. A small-to-medium scaled pattern should be used for fabric or wallpaper and should blend in with colors. Medium textures are best throughout the house. Floorcoverings that are wall-to-wall and are close to the same color as the wall will make the room seem more spacious. Light colors, such as yellow, beige, white and ivory, or cool colors, such as light blue or green, used on the wall and floor will seem to enlarge a room.

In a small area it is more important to use only the furniture that is needed. When less furniture is used the leftover space gives a feeling of openness and helps traffic flow from one room to another.

Use simple, small-scale furniture in a small room. Low-backed sofas and chairs with exposed arms and legs, as opposed to large, oversized sofas with wide arms, will make a room seem less crowded. Glass and chrome furniture seem to fill less space and are good to use.

Extending space can also be achieved by using multipurpose furniture, such as sleeper sofas, and table desks. Wall storage also makes good use of vertical space. Furniture should be arranged in compact groups with lines parallel to the walls to give a greater feeling of unity and space. The larger pieces, such as the sofa, should be placed against a wall and not in a diagonal position.

Although the main pieces of furniture in a room are limited as far as color and placement, this limitation has been done to visually extend the space. Interesting and contrasting colors, textures and patterns can now be added with accessories. Throw pillows, pictures, vases, rocks and green plants all are great accent pieces.

Mirrors can also be used to enlarge small spaces since they are reflective. They are more effective when placed in a corner from floor to ceiling. Mirrors can be used behind open shelves on storage walls or behind shelves with collections. A view outside the house treated in the right way can extend space visually and provide a pleasant view. Where there is a large window or sliding glass door, a redwood or cypress baffle can be placed a few feet away and covered with plants and greenery to create an extended space.

Living in less space is a creative challenge. You will find it has many advantages such as less furniture to buy, less area to clean, less to paint and repair and less space to heat and cool. Less can be better in this time of high inflation. Contact your local Cooperative Extension agent for additional suggestions for making the most of your living space.

The Case of the $300 Oil Bill

Carl Caring lived a quiet life on a quiet suburban street with his quiet wife, Carol. Disaster struck in the form of his monthly oil bill. "$300 bucks" anguished Caring. "I'm calling Inspector Scott. He's a professional energy inspector."

Before you could say Great Scott, the Inspector arrived. Scott's steely gray eyes scanned the room missing nothing. The energy sleuth furrowed his brow, paused, then announced, "The culprit will be found in the basement." He bounded down the stairs. "There it is in the shadows," said Scott beaming his powerful flashlight on an innocent looking furnace. Scott immediately knew that the furnace harbored an oil burner circa 1967.

"That's a rather costly memento. That burner was designed when oil was cheap.

Our three-minute firing test will probably show that it is operating at less than 70% efficiency and is burning too much oil."

"Maybe so" said Caring. "But I can't see myself clear to buy a new burner."

"You don't have to buy a new one," said the kindly energy inspector. "A Scott Energy Dealer will lease you a modern flame retention Enerjet burner for $15.95 a month."

It'll probably save you twice that much on your monthly fuel bill. You'll get a new burner, a service contract, a smaller oil bill and a warmer house." The case of the $300 oil bill had a happy ending. The Inspector smiled and twirled his bushy mustache.

Caring smiled and twirled his telephone dial. He called the nearby Scott Energy Dealer to see about leasing a new Enerjet burner.

LEASE THIS BURNER
for $15.95 per month.
Service contract included.
Laboratory certified to be energy efficient.

I'm interested in the Enerjet Burner Lease Program outlined by Inspector Scott.

THREE RIDERS HEAD OUT as they take part in branding operation at Pine Creek Ranch. The riders rope the calves and drag them from the herd. (UPI)

RIDER REINS his mount in quest for unbranded livestock. The calves play hide-and-seek among their mothers in hopes of avoiding the branding iron. (UPI)

CALVES ARE ROPED, usually by the feet, and dragged clear of the herd for branding. Jim Maupin grabs the calf here as Leon Gage waits for his rope back. Maupin holds calf until branding team arrives. (UPI)

A FINAL RIDE through the herd to check for an unmarked hide and the job is done. (UPI)

Oregon buckeroos will get the calves

One of the rites of spring in eastern Oregon is the branding of cattle. Branding at the Pine Creek Ranch in Harney County finds the air thick with brown dust and a cacophony of moos and bleats blots out all other sounds.

Buckeroos on horseback rope calves from the throng and anxious mothers follow close behind. Men throw the calves to the ground and hold them securely. Each calf has the undivided attention of six people for about three minutes as two hold, one marks and castrates, another dehornes, a fifth vaccinates and a sixth brands the flank. The calf is soon back on its wobbly legs and looking for mother. The branding is a family affair with wives, sons, neighbors and friends taking part.

Cattle are branded and marked for identification. A few days after branding, when it's certain all calves are healthy, the cattle are let out onto the range for summer feeding. In the fall, the ranchers round up the herd, picking their cattle by brands. (UPI)

Be safe with guns

Informal clay target shooting and plinking are among the most popular shooting activities. They provide hours of enjoyment throughout the year for shooters of all ages. Practice is also one of the best ways hunters can ensure good marksmanship during the hunting season.

Despite the casual atmosphere of informal shooting, it's important to follow the same strict safety procedures as would be followed on the range or at the gun club.

One of the best ways to ensure safe shooting is make sure the gun's muzzle is always pointed in a safe direction. It should never be pointed at anyone, and it should never be pointed at anything not intended to be a target.

For more information on firearms safety, write SAAMI Safety Series, 1075 Post Road, Riverside, Ct. 06878.

Quiet music, driving music

By WILLIAM PACINO

Music leads the list this week with two different events highlighting the local entertainment scene.

On May 9th in Weston and May 10 in Cambridge, the Mystic Valley Chamber Orchestra will perform Dvorak's "Wind Serenade", Bartak's "Divertimento for Strings", Stravinsky's "Symphonies of Wind Instruments" and Britten's "Serenade for Tenor, Horn and Strings". Performances are at 8 PM Saturday, May 9th in St. Peter's Episcopal Church, 320 Boston Post Rd. (Rt. 20) Weston, and at 3 PM Sunday, May 10 in First Church Congregational Church, 11 Garden St. on Cambridge Common.

These performances provide a rare opportunity to hear four tonal Twentieth Century masterpieces for string and wind orchestra performed by one of the Boston-area's best community orchestras.

Included in the membership of the Orchestra are John Baxter and Michel Perrault of Winchester and Kenneth Seitz of Woburn. For reservations and additional information, phone 924-4939.

The Boston Bluegrass Union's May show promises to be a real treat. It features Banjo Dan and the Midnite Plowboys, a five-member band from the Burlington, Vermont area whose hallmark is a traditional approach with fresh material and arrangements. Opening the show is Lost in the Shuffle, a new, Boston-based group with a real down-home, country sound.

This presentation will take place May 17th at 7 PM at the First Church Congregational Church in Cambridge. For further information, call 661-0214.

THEATER:

Our Lady of Nazareth Academy's Dramatic Society will present "Kaleidoscope", a collage of drama, comedy and nonsense scenes on Saturday, May 16 at 8 PM in the school auditorium in Wakefield. Area students involved in the production are: Angela Binda and Ann Burke of Stoneham, Sheila Call of Tewksbury, Abbie Herrick of Wilmington, Alaina Levesque of Woburn and Janice McGonagle of Lynnfield and Lucy Vanderbilt of Winchester. For details, call the school at 245-5210.

Dave Allen, star of the hit BBC television series "Dave Allen at Large", opens in his American debut with his acclaimed one-man show, presenting an "evening of comedy and satire" at the Wilbur Theatre, for a limited two-week engagement, May 11 through May 23.

Hailed as the "most potent Thinking-man's comedian possibly that these islands have produced" by England's Daily Mail, Dave Allen is famous throughout Great Britain for his wry commentary on topical issues, amusing anecdotes and colorful monologues. His unique one-man show, comprising a series of dialogues and sketches, promises a spectacular evening of comedy. First presented in England in 1978, it consistently broke box office records of that country's leading theatres.

Dave Allen first gained widespread recognition with his BBC produced program "Tonight with Dave Allen", a late night talk show involving him in funny, informative and often extremely dangerous situations with his guests.

Dave Allen will perform at the Wilbur Theatre on 246 Tremont St. in Boston from May 11 through May 23. For tickets and information, call 423-4008.

THE ARTS:

The inaugural season of the Metropolitan Center's International Dance Series, opening July 21 with the Boston debut of the Netherlands Dance Theatre, also makes possible the long-awaited return of the Royal Ballet, New York City Ballet and American Ballet Theatre in their first performances in Boston since the 1960s.

The Royal Danish Ballet and the Joffrey Ballet are also under consideration for the Dance Series.

The Summer Series features back-to-back one-week engagements by Netherlands Dance Theatre and the Royal Ballet which celebrates its fiftieth anniversary year with its first performances in Boston since 1969.

The Dutch company, which was founded in the Hague in 1959, will premiere in Boston "Symphony of Psalms" by Stravinsky, "Dream Dances" by Berio, and "Sinfonietta" by Janacek on the first program and "Field Mass" by Martinu on the second program.

The Fall Series includes the first performances in Boston since 1967 by New York City Ballet, and since 1962 by American Ballet Theatre. New York City Ballet, which appears in the Metropolitan Center October 27 through November 1, presently performs twenty-three weeks a year at Lincoln Center and summers at Saratoga Performing Arts Center.

American Ballet Theatre's performances in Boston November 3 through 8, its first in Boston since the appointment of Mikhail Baryshnikov as its artistic director, follow an eight-week engagement at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York.

Charter subscriptions for the entire season are available by calling the Metropolitan Center 542-3600 or by mail order, 268 Tremont St. Boston 02116. Orders received before May 17 will be eligible for a twenty percent discount off regular box office prices for the Summer Series attractions.

Gypsy moths threatening

In the past few years there have been serious outbreaks of gypsy moths in Massachusetts. These outbreaks have recently caused defoliation and overall weakening and stress on our forest and shade trees. This year should be the last of the current infestation. The following is a schedule of the approximate growth and development of gypsy moths for this year according to the University of Massachusetts Shade Tree Laboratories.

May 1 — Eggs begin hatching, first instar larvae and ballooning (larvae blown by wind), people complaining about small caterpillar nuisance. Leaf buds on maple trees begin to open. Shadbush begins to flower.

May 10 — Beginning second instars (growth stage of the caterpillars).

May 15 — Beginning of chemical spray period for control, oak foliage about one half-two thirds developed.

May 20 — Second instars and some thirds, spray time for first of two spray BT (Bacillus Thuringiensis) application time.

May 30 — Second, thirds and some fourths, second BT application time.

June 10 — Thirds and fourths, first defoliation noticeable.

June 15 — Fourth and fifth, end of chemical spray period.

June 20 — Sixths and few sevenths, larvae begin crawling on trees and buildings in search of pupation sites. Where they are a nuisance on buildings hose them off with plain water.

June 25 — Cocoons and pupae.

July 10 — Adult moth emergence and mating, males fly — females remain mostly on trees.

July 15 — Egg laying begins.

This schedule provides information as to when and how to control the gypsy moths this year. If control measures aren't used, the schedule provides a reference as to when damage is expected. A virus disease is expected to cause mortality within the late instars of the caterpillars, however, heavy defoliation is expected before the virus takes effect. So keep your eyes open for the arrival of the gypsy moths!

Fellowships available for cooks

Julia Child has provided the initial funding for an International Culinary Fellowship program to help talented young cooks become masters in their profession. The program, which will be under the direction of the Permanent Charity Fund of Boston, will give selected candidates the opportunity to receive advanced training in France.

Fellowship stipends ranging from $5,000 to $15,000 will support up to a year of study abroad — attending a particular school, or working in a specialized area, or with a particular chef.

Candidates should have a college degree or its equivalent and at least three years of professional experience. Reasonable fluency in French is also required.

For one who would like to be an apprentice in an outstanding restaurant, a training stipend may be important because of the French government's restrictions on the employment of foreigners.

Applications may be obtained from: The International Culinary Fellowship Program, Permanent Charity Fund of Boston, One Boston Place, Boston, Mass. 02106.

Spotlighters will perform

The 28th annual New England Theatre Conference (NETC) Community Theatre Drama Festival will be held in Springfield Theatre at Brandeis University, Waltham, Mass. May 13 to 17, 1981. Twenty-four community theatre groups from New England states will perform a variety of productions, covering a full range of dramatic and musical offerings. All entries must comply with stringent competition rules.

The Festival will be played in six sessions over the five-day period. Following each session, a professional adjudicator will give a public critique of all productions. The four top-ranked productions will be performed again in a "Finals" session on Sunday evening, and a special guest judge will select the winner of the "Best Production" award from among the finalists. Additionally, awards will be presented for outstanding achievements in acting, directing and technical aspects of theatre production.

All evening sessions, Wednesday through Sunday, begin at 7:30, and afternoon sessions, Friday through Sunday, begin at 12:00 noon.

The Festival is open to the general public, and tickets will be available at the door for all sessions. Admission to the entire Festival, which includes the Finals, is $15.00.

To make ticket reservations or for further information, contact Bonnie Bailey at 667-4337.

To continue providing services to more than 30 million veterans and their families, the Veterans Administration has requested a record high $24.9 billion for fiscal year 1982.

Eight Bells, by Winslow Homer
Addison Gallery of American Art

American Art at its best

The Addison Gallery invites the public to the highlight of its 50th Anniversary Celebration: six simultaneous exhibitions offering a kaleidoscope of American art at its provocative best. From Winslow Homer seascapes to photographer Sandy Skoglund's "Radioactive Cats", these exhibits demonstrate the museum's penchant for exploring a variety of avenues of art. All exhibits will open at 1:30 p.m. on Saturday, May 9, the day of the Celebration.

The Addison collection is "one of the richest of all those specializing in American art, ranging from early colonial times to the present day," according to Boston Museum of Fine Arts Director Jan Fontein, and the best of the Addison will be featured in Masterworks From The Addison Collection. The artists represented span more than two centuries of American art and include Copley, West, Inness, Homer, Remington, Twachtman, Prendergast, Bruce, Maurer, Hartley, Bellows, Davies, Hopper, Avery, Hofmann, and Pollock.

New, Now, New York explores the cutting edge of contemporary American art. The exhibit takes a hard look at strong young emerging artists working in the world's art capital. Among the artists selected are Crowder, Shapiro, Nelson, Zucker, Shabel, Land and Sultan. Robert A. Feldman '54, President of Parasol Press in New York and a publisher of fine art, is the guest curator for this exhibition.

Sandy Skoglund — Radioactive Cats brings together two kinds of art with which the Addison has long been concerned, environmental sculpture and photography. It presents an environment constructed specifically for the purpose of being photographed and the resultant photograph which, writes Pamela Allara in Art News, "is initially amusing but quickly becomes unsettling." Ms. Skoglund's work has been widely shown, including exhibitions at the Fogg Art Museum, Cambridge, Mass.; the Texas Gallery, Houston, Texas; and, most recently, the Whitney Biennale in New York. "Radioactive Cats" is arranged through the courtesy of the Leo Castelli Gallery, New York.

Secondary Impressions focuses on high quality work by students at Phillips Academy, member schools of the Art Association of New England Preparatory Schools and Andover High School.

The Addison Gallery is open to the public free of charge. Regular museum hours are: Tuesday-Saturday 10:00 a.m. — 5:00 p.m.; Sundays 2:30-5:30 p.m.
